We Are Not Jealous.
Mr. Agha Arrives.
Men Die, Variously.
Moses and Coolidge.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE FRENCH ARE disappointed in Britain's reply to Briand's plan for a "United States of Europe."

The British, according to diplomatic tradition, beat about the bush. They fear a new idea might interfere with the League of Nations. Or it might seem to offer organized opposition "to other continents," meaning this continent.

THE FACT IS that the British are satisfied with their own United States called "the British Empire" and covering a good deal of the globe.

"Divide and govern" is still the essence of diplomatic wisdom. Britain doesn't want a power greater than the British Empire organized across the channel on the continent of Europe.

AS TO INTERFERING with this continent or competing with it, Britain need not worry.

We are not jealous or antagonistic.

Our own United States is doing well, and if we attend to it and let Europe attend to its affairs, we shall be wise.

Any immediate American alliance might include Mexico and Canada, each co-operating to keep this continent invincible. Other alliances are not necessary or desirable.

THE OLDEST TURK, Zaro Agha, who thinks he is 156 years old, arrived in the United States yesterday.

He comes with three ideas in his mind. First, to make money by exhibiting himself. He will surely do that. Second, to get a set of false teeth, well made by an American dentist. That will be easy and a blessing.

Third, to get a wife. That will not be difficult either, horrible as it sounds. There are many foolish women.

The part about the wife is probably the invention of a press agent. If wise, Mr. Agha will return with his money and his false teeth, abandoning the third idea.

MEN ARE BORN and die in different ways, as doctors and public executioners can testify.

Charles the First demanded warm clothing for his beheading, fearing that he might shiver with cold and be accused of cowardice.

A BRAVER AND better man, who had signed a recantation of his faith and then reaffirmed it, held his hand in the fire and burned it off before he would let them burn the rest of his body. "This hand, this guilty hand, hath offended," said he.

ON THURSDAY night, "justice" killed three in Sing Sing's electric chair. Grezchowiak and Rybarczyk went to death protesting their innocence. One requested time to finish his cigaret.

Alexander Bogdenoff admitted his guilt, but insisted that his two companions in the death house were innocent, saying:

"Two Chicago gunmen helped me bump off Fechter in that payroll job."

BOGDENOFF WALKED to the chair philosophizing, in gangster fashion, saying, "This funny looking piece of furniture," after he had been strapped in the electric chair,

"You have just seen them kill two innocent men," he said to the assembled witnesses. "I tried to save them, but my words were no good."

As they strapped his head back to receive the current in his brain, Bogdenoff said, "Why pray now? I don't give a damn," and so one man went out to learn what happens.

SENATOR MOSES, attacking the naval pact, says, "Coolidge refused to accept such a treaty."

President Coolidge knows what the real people of the United States want. He has studied that problem in 20 campaigns.

BUT PRESIDENT COOLIDGE was not controlled by the actions of President Harding, and President Hoover is not controlled by the views of President Coolidge.

YESTERDAY IN HIS daily article in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and other papers, Mr. Coolidge rebuked the thoughtlessness that praises a president when everything goes well and he needs no praise, and raises its voice against him "if prosperity diminishes."

NEITHER MR. COOLIDGE nor President Hoover, however, would, if he could, eliminate public criticism entirely. It is needed by presidents for their guidance, even when it is unwise or unjust, just as it is needed by newspaper editors, preachers, and all that carry responsibility.

MAURICE GRAHAM, veteran among courageous air mail pilots, crashed and lay unburied for six months in the mountains of western Utah. He was lost in a blizzard.

LAST NIGHT another pilot, Fred Kelly, of the Western Air Express, carried Graham's ashes along the route that Graham used to fly, scattering the ashes as he went.

Interesting idea, easily understood. Our bodies and the ashes they leave in the crematory retort interest us.

BUT WHERE IS GRAHAM? Where is the courage that carried him so far through the blizzard, over the Kaharra

WATCHMAN RUN DOWN, KILLED

Suspect Traced to Ohio After Companion Gives Clue; Auto Found Abandoned

James R. McCarthy, 22, of 1817 Greenleaf street, was named today as the hit-and-run driver whose machine struck and killed William W. Irwin, 65, of 1912 St. Mark's place, watchman for the John F. Casey Company, in Saw Mill Run boulevard early yesterday.

Frank Staub, 28, of 1425 Woodville avenue, testified in Mt. Washington Police Court that he was sitting beside McCarthy, who was driving, when the car struck a man.

Staub testified:

"I told him to stop, but he was afraid, and kept going."

Staub said he could not drive, and feared to make an attempt to stop the automobile. It was later found abandoned nearby.

John Walsh, 21, of 1117 Wabash avenue, testified that while he and McCarthy were at a theater yesterday afternoon McCarthy admitted to him he had had an accident in Saw Mill Run boulevard earlier in the day, and that he was "heading for Toledo after the show."

McCarthy was arrested last night as he alighted from a bus at Youngstown, O., and was brought back here. He was held by homicide detectives for questioning, and did not appear at the hearing.

Walsh and Staub, arrested as material witnesses, were held over by Magistrate John J. Sweeney after the hearing.

U. S. NET STAR TOPS ITALIAN

AUTEUIL, France, July 19.—(AP.)—George Lott, of Chicago, needed only a few minutes today to complete the job he began yesterday and defeat Baron Humbert de Morpurgo, of Italy, by the total scores of 3-6, 9-7, 10-8, 6-3, and give the United States its second victory in two matches of the interzone Davis Cup tennis final.

Rain, which held up yesterday's program for more than an hour, also delayed the start of play this afternoon.

The victory gave the United States two points to Italy's none, Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., previously having defeated Giorgio Stefani. The third point needed by America is fully expected to be gained this afternoon in the doubles.

Only one set of the Lott-Morpurgo match was played today, the other three having been finished yesterday before darkness called a halt to the proceedings.

Dog Race Promoters Still Seek Loophole

A loophole to conduct dog races at the Blawnox track, by selling an interest in the animal, is still being sought, Attorney Joseph H. Reich, representing the Guyasuta Kennel Club, said today.

He asserted no races would be run over the week-end. Meanwhile District Attorney A. T. Park announced that he was keeping a strict watch on the track, to see that his anti-gambling order is enforced if the racing should be renewed.

JOSEPH F. McMANAMA, 70

MAN, 70, DENIES LOVE NOTES

"I didn't know anything about this until the attorney told me about it."

J. F. McManama, 70-year-old business man, of 5615 Woodmont street, charged with alienating the affections of the 21-year-old wife of David N. Miller, of Aspinwall, today stood by his denial of all the charges made by the husband.

McManama admitted he had known Mrs. Miller since she was a small girl, but his friendship did not go beyond a mere acquaintance, he said.

McManama pointed out that he is a 70-year-old man with an invalid wife and vehemently declared he was not the author of the "darling" and "honey" letters which Miller claims were written by McManama to Mrs. Miller in invisible ink which needed to be applied to a hot iron to bring out the words.

Miller's wife has been missing from her home since May, but McManama denied that he had seen her for a year. He was slightly acquainted with her family, he admitted.

GIRL LOSES LIFE AS SPEED BOAT RAMS YAWL

Coast Guardsmen Recover Body in Lake Michigan; Others in Wreck Rescued

International News Service.

CHICAGO July 19.—Coast Guardsmen today recovered from the waters of Lake Michigan the body of Miss Betty Ayers, 18-year-old guest of a party whose speed boat last night collided with the yawl Scarab, owned and piloted by George Pulver, millionaire mortgage broker of Washington, D. C.

Force of the impact hurled the girl into the water, where she struck her head on one of the boats and sank.

The yawl, a 63-foot motor and sail-driven boat, was sent to the bottom of the lake. The four men aboard took to a life boat and were rescued, uninjured.

BOTH BOATS SINK

Both boats sank, interlocked among a mass of floating debris. Screams of the young people were heard by persons on shore, a mile away, as the party boat sank. The passengers were taken off by rescue craft before the boat's decks were awash.

Children of several wealthy families of Evanston and Wilmette, Chicago suburbs, made up the party aboard the speed boat. The party was given by children of Benjamin H. Marshall, millionaire architect.

Benjamin Marshall, Jr., 21, in charge of the boating party, was hurled into the water and seriously injured.

CRASH HALTS DANCING

There was a radio aboard and the young people were dancing when the crash sprawled them across the decks, hurling Miss Ayers and Marshall into the lake.

Pulver, a prominent yachtsman, was here to participate in today's races to Mackinac Island.

The Marshall party reported that they saw no lights aboard the Scarab. The occupants of both boats were taken aboard a passing passenger steamer. An inquest has been set for today.

WICHITA, Kan., July 19.—(AP.)—Ward Braley, 18-year-old plane designer, was injured fatally last night when he fell 100 feet in a glider of his own construction at a field east of Wichita. He died in a hospital shortly after the accident.

FRANCE HONORS PITTSBURGH WOMAN

Mrs. W. Harry Brown Made Legion of Honor Officer; Socially Prominent Here

PARIS, July 19.—(AP.)—Mrs. W. Harry Brown, of Pittsburgh, was promoted today to be an officer of the Legion of Honor in an unusual ceremony at the palace of the Legion of Honor.

The insignia was pinned on her by Gen. Dubail, grand chancellor of the order, as she stood beneath the portrait of Napoleon in the salon.

She was the first woman to be decorated there since the order was given the late Empress Eugenie.

Mrs. Edge, wife of Walter E. Edge, American ambassador, was among the friends present.

Mrs. W. Harry Brown, Pittsburgh society leader, made an officer in the celebrated Legion of Honor, maintains a residence at 5742 Fifth avenue. Most of her recent social activities, however, have been abroad.

She has been presented at the British court several times, and her dinners, reputed to be the acme of "severe correctness," have been a feature of the American season in London, where she has a big house in Grosvenor square.

Mrs. Brown is the widow of W. Harry Brown, for many years a steamboat captain, known all along the Ohio River from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati. She is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

RITES SUNDAY FOR TROOPER

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 19.—While state police of the Greensburg barracks today were broadening their investigation into the slaying of State Policeman Charles L. Stewart and John Sabo, alleged extortionist, in Monessen yesterday, relatives were planning a funeral for the slain policeman at his home in Reynoldsville.

Trumpeters, a firing squad and pallbearers from Troop A, of which the slain private was a member, will attend the services at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Police investigating the record of Sabo, said by Monessen officers to have been arrested on several minor charges in the past, today were trying to determine if he had accomplices in the sending of a threatening letter to W. F. Wright, furniture dealer, in which the merchant was threatened with death if he failed to place $10,000 near the main entrance of Grandview Cemetery in Monessen.

Sabo, trapped by five state troopers when he went to collect the money, opened fire on Stewart when the policeman called to him and asked his identity.

Sabo answered the query with a shot, the bullet penetrating the policeman's body. As he fell, Stewart fired twice at Sabo, one bullet crashing through his brain. Sabo died instantly. The policeman died later in Monongahela Hospital.

Marriage License Found, Awaits Bridal Pair

The former Miss Alice Loohey, of Parnassus, and Harry D. LeClere, of Arnold, who were married in Wellsburg, W. Va., yesterday, may have their marriage license if they call at the Squirrel Hill Police Station and identify themselves.

The license was found in Schenley Park yesterday. It had been issued yesterday morning in Wellsburg and the marriage was performed there a short time later. A motorist found the paper and turned it over to Motorcycle Patrolman John Kennington.

FLIER RESCUED FROM JUNGLE

LONDON July 19.—(INS.)—Eric Hook, young British airman who crashed with a companion on his attempted flight from England to Australia, has been found in a small Burmese village, according to an unconfirmed report published by the London Evening Standard today.

Widespread search had been under way for a week in the Burmese jungles, with hope almost abandoned. Hook's companion, Jimmie Matthews, reached Prome, Burma, after struggling through the jungle for nine days.

Matthews carried Hook, seriously injured, on his back and dragged him through the underbrush for a week. Then he went on alone, too exhausted to aid his companion further. Matthews hoped to find a friendly tribe which would save Hook.

The Burmese jungle is full of savage animals.

Mary Lewis Files New Divorce Suit

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—(AP.)—Mary Lewis, whose marriage in New York, in 1927, to Michael Bohnen, while they were Metropolitan Opera stars, was described as "ideal," for the second time in two years sued for divorce here. The first suit was dropped. It charged cruelty. The present suit charges desertion. Miss Lewis alleged the baritone deserted her July 1, 1929, and went to Germany.

WOMAN DROWNS AFTER QUARREL

The body of Mrs. Hattie Ford, 30, of 111 River avenue, Natrona, was found early today floating in Allegheny River near her home.

It was reported to the coroner that she had quarreled with her husband, Emmet Ford, steward of the Natrona Eagles' Club, and disappeared from her home at 3 a. m. Friday.

The presumption of suicide was made in testimony given by neighbors of the dead woman to Deputy Coroner John Danner, who is investigating the case.

The body was found by Mike Jinosky, of 31 Spruce street, Natrona.

TORRID WAVE GRIPS U. S., DROUGHT FEARED

Record Temperatures Noted In Many Parts of Nation; Water Supply Goes Low

One death from the heat was reported today as the mercury climbed toward yesterday's mark of 93, with prospect of only slight relief from the torridity and severe drought.

At 10 a. m. the thermometer had mounted to 84, the highest mark reached at that hour this season. Forecaster W. S. Brotzman predicted continued warm weather with a "probability of local showers" tomorrow.

Irene, 18-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar L. Spetcher, 2413 Harrison street, McKeesport, died today of heat prostration, according to the coroner's report.

TWO PROSTRATIONS

Two heat victims were recovering in hospitals today. They are P. Durkin, 25, of Purnell street, overcome at Sixth street and Duquesne way late yesterday, in Allegheny General Hospital, and Hugh Parker, 61, no home, in South Side Hospital. Parker collapsed on the steps of the home of Mrs. Alfred B. Lloyd, 707 Wensel way, last night.

Brotzman said the drought in some districts was the worst on record.

DROUGHT FEARED

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP.)—A withering heat fastened itself upon the United States today.

From Great Lakes to Gulf and from ocean to ocean, the continent literally "cooked." Three-figure temperature readings were common. Ninety degrees or better were recorded in virtually every section.

The average maximum temperature for the nation yesterday was 90.5.

The country's granaries, baked hard by the persistent sun, faced drought. Live stock in many places saw green pastures turn russet and die. Danger of corn being fired in the field was felt in Iowa.

A few deaths occurred, but the number was not large considering the extent of the heat wave.

Beaches, especially those near large cities, swarmed with people.

WATER SUPPLY WANES

PHILLIPSBURG, Kan., had 113 degrees and Emporia had 109. Scores of other communities in the Middle West reported unofficial readings above 100 degrees.

Weather prophets were doubtful concerning any immediate relief.

The need of rain was felt in a score of states.

The heat has proved a serious tax upon pumping stations. Already in parts of Maryland warning has been given that unless

Stadtfeld and Girl Hurt in Crash Better

The condition of Joseph Stadtfeld, Jr., 28, of 5575 Wilkins avenue, son of Judge Joseph Stadtfeld, of Common Pleas Court, and Jane Day, 26, of Charleroi, who were injured yesterday when a roadster driven by Stadtfeld crashed into a retaining wall at Bigelow boulevard and North Craig street, was reported slightly improved at St. Francis Hospital today. Both are suffering from head injuries.

Coolidge Makes Appeal For Human Fellowship

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., July 19.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

This world is made up of all kinds of people. Some are good and some are better, while others have made it necessary for the government to take charge of them. But it is a very hasty and ill-considered judgment to conclude that there is more bad than good in any one. We are all a combination of both elements.

CALVIN COOLIDGE

While we ought not to approve of the evil in ourselves or in others, if we should attempt to have no associations with any but saints we should find ourselves very lonely. The only perfect man ate and drank with publicans and sinners. It did not scandalize him. It was some of those who were not perfect who were scandalized.

There is enough good in all of us to support the law of human fellowship. We shall be much more effective for good if we treat men not as they are, but as they ought to be.

If we judge ourselves only by our aspirations and everyone else only by their conduct we shall reach a very false conclusion. When we have exhausted the possibilities of criticism on ourselves it will be time enough to apply it to others. The world needs high social standards and we should do our best to maintain them, but they should rest on the broad base of Christian charity.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Tree Sitters' Alarm Saves Home From Flames

From their lookout in the boughs, Brushton's tree-sitters today discovered a dwelling on fire a block away on a hillside, and shouted the alarm.

A pedestrian called fire-fighters at a nearby fire box. Firemen, responding, extinguished a blaze, which caused $500 damage, in rooms occupied by William Bazzil, Negro, in a three-story frame dwelling owned by Edward Martin, 532 Karl street.

It was the tree dwellers' second experience with fire in their perch in two trees in Sickles street.

"There's dirty work afoot," whispered Lawrence Gravely, 11, to his cousin, Sam King, 14, perched high in a locust tree in the Gravely back yard at 4 a. m. today. King looked in the direction his cousin was pointing.

Under a cherry tree nearby, where James, 14, and Robert Gravely, 9, occupy another perch in their "until-school-starts endurance nesting contest," someone had built a fire, and the rope and basket used in hoisting food from the ground already had "gone up in flames."

The two boys called to the others. Awakened by their shouts, they took up the cry of fire, and in a few minutes neighbors flocked out to learn the trouble.

The fire was extinguished.

"Someone's trying to smoke us out," young Robert called down later. "But they can't do it—we're here till school begins."

HOOVER ORDERS GOVERNMENT PROGRAM OF ECONOMY

SEES DEFICIT AS REVENUE FALLS OFF

Departments to Cut Costs Below Budget Estimates, By President's Command

WASHINGTON, July 19 — (AP) — At the direction of President Hoover heads of the government departments are conducting a rigid inquiry into expenditures to see if savings can be made during the present fiscal year.

The object of the search is to reduce disbursements below the budget estimates as a means of offsetting a possible slump in government revenue due to the business depression.

METHODS BEING SOUGHT

This was announced by President Hoover in a statement issued late yesterday in response to the questions of newspaper correspondents. He said:

"The cabinet members and heads of independent agencies have undertaken a searching inquiry into every branch of the government as to methods by which economies may be brought about for the fiscal year without interfering with the program of aid to unemployment.

"I am confident that we will find measures for very considerable reductions of outlay below the amounts appropriated. What the amount may be cannot be determined until we have completed our investigation."

The cabinet meeting yesterday he said was devoted largely to a discussion of government finances as they are affected by recent appropriations.

EXPLAINS LARGER BUDGET

The budget for the present fiscal year he continued, has been increased by about $209,000,000 above the actual expenditures of the last fiscal year. Mr. Hoover explained:

"The largest increases are for speeding up of buildings, inland waterways and public works generally, to assist in unemployment, together with the increased relief of veterans."

POINTS TO 'CONFUSION'

The President said there had been some "confusion" as to the amount of increased expenditures imposed by Congress.

Mistaken inclusion of authorized programs which extend over many years, such as public buildings, roads, and rivers and harbors, were held by Mr. Hoover to have created the confusion as well as comparisons which include the post-office outlays. He declared:

"It has always been the practice to include only the post office deficit. Otherwise real comparisons would be destroyed by the variations in post office operations."

OHIO, W. VA. SUFFER

WASHINGTON, July 19 — (AP) — Streams fell lower and crops grew drier today while the lands of a score of states parched harder in the grip of a months-long drouth. The end could not be foreseen today by the United States Weather Bureau.

The drouth was described as gripping its hardest in Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, Maryland and Virginia. Statistics showed it the worst ever recorded in these states, having extended in most cases over the past eight months.

J. B. Kincer, chief of the weather bureau's division of agricultural meteorology, calculated today that in Ohio the shortage of rainfall on the basis of normal precipitation has actually amounted to 140,000,000 tons of water a day for the past 137 days.

118 ON BORDER

LOS ANGELES, July 19 — (AP) — Southern California's record-breaking six-day heat wave receded today after having taken eight lives.

Matilda Lagrant, 76, died yesterday in an auto camp at Holtville, in the Imperial Valley. Her death raised to seven the number of fatalities occurring in the below-sea-level valley.

All sections outside Imperial Valley reported below 90 degrees' weather. Los Angeles cooling off to 84. In the Imperial district the thermometers still were above 100 degrees, but lower humidity was reported. El Centro registered 106.

During the heat wave a high mark of 118 degrees was reached Monday at Calexico, on the Mexican border.

The first sunstroke death in Los Angeles County in more than two decades occurred Thursday at Montebello, Los Angeles suburb.

FIRE WRECKS STORAGE PLANT

The pattern storage plant of the Springfield Foundry Company, at 3215 Smallman street, was virtually destroyed by fire which broke out in the rear of the first floor of the two-story sheet iron structure last night.

The interior of the building was a mass of flames when firemen, responding to an alarm sounded by a pedestrian, arrived. The flames were confined to the building after a two-hour battle.

Battalion Chief James Callaghan and J. J. Pottmeyer, superintendent of the plant, estimated the damage at $20,000.

A bullet wound near the heart caused his death, police said. A revolver with one empty chamber was found on a nearby desk. The coroner was notified.

BRITISH THREAT STIRS EGYPT

LONDON, July 19 — (INS) — Simultaneously with the receipt of reports here from Alexandria that British warships had arrived there to safeguard foreign lives and property, Premier Sidky Pasha, of Egypt, accused the British government of interfering with internal affairs on the Nile.

Protesting the general tenor of the British note forwarded by Premier MacDonald that the Egyptian government would be held accountable for the protection of foreign lives and interests, Sidky Pasha asserted that he had always demonstrated his government's ability to meet its obligations.

He called the dispatching of British warships to Alexandria unnecessary, pointing out that the sporadic outbreaks soon were quelled and the ringleaders arrested. Military forces at his disposal, he concluded, are sufficient to cope with any disorders by Wafdist factions.

While calm was reported from Alexandria, where 14 persons had been killed in political riots, Cairo said Wafdist agents had been warning European shops of forcible steps to be taken against them, if they persisted in doing business.

CONTRACT DATE DEBATED IN STEEL SUIT

Point Raised in Argument Over Income of Grace; Case to Resume Monday

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 19 — (AP.) — The effective date of the contract for a merger between Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company and Bethlehem Steel Corporation became a vital issue in the suit to enjoin the deal yesterday and caused Judge David G. Jenkins to adjourn court early to give it consideration over the weekend.

The point as to when the merger would become effective was raised by the defense as attorneys for the Cyrus S. Eaton interests sought to have Eugene G. Grace reveal his 1929 earnings as president of Bethlehem. Eaton, a Cleveland capitalist, is chief opponent of the merger.

FIX MERGER DATE

The court had ruled that Grace could not be questioned about his salary and bonus prior to April 30, 1930, when, under the apparent terms of the contract, the merger would have been completed had the injunction suit not been filed.

Attorney F. H. Wood of defense counsel informed the court that by mutual agreement the date for the merger had been extended to July 31, pending outcome of the suit.

Having already ruled that stockholders of the Youngstown company were not entitled to know how much compensation Grace received prior to the time they would have become stockholders of the Bethlehem corporation, Judge Jenkins now must decide that date. If he rules in favor of the defense and fixes the date in the future, Grace would be unable to testify as to his compensation for that period.

REACH CRUCIAL POINT

When he adjourned court Judge Jenkins said:

"The court is of the opinion we have reached such an important and critical, and I may say, determining point in this case that I desire to take sufficient time to deliberate and to permit counsel to throw any additional light on the subject. That and the depression in the atmosphere causes me to adjourn this court."

Attorney Luther Day, chief of Eaton counsel, announced he would argue the point at the opening of court Monday.

Grace's salary and bonus figure in the suit because of the Eaton contention that concealment of his compensation from the Youngstown stockholders before they ratified the merger in April this year constituted fraud.

Married

MRS. TOMMY HAYDEN

GOLF CHAMPION WEDS HERE

Tommy Hayden, 23, golf pro of Panama, who on July 4 won the Isthmus golf championship of Panama, was married in Dormont last Wednesday, it was learned today. Miss Stalutyne Filling, 26, of 1476 Edgehill avenue, Dormont, an actress, is the bride.

The ceremony was performed in the Bethany Lutheran Church, of Dormont. The Rev. Carl F. Lauer officiated. The bride was given away by her sister, Mrs. Malvin Grindell, of Baltimore, and Mr. Hayden was attended by his brother-in-law, C. J. Boe, of Pittsburgh. There were 30 guests present at the church and at the reception which followed at the bride's home. Mr. and Mrs. Hayden are honeymooning on a Great Lakes cruise.

Mrs. Hayden, who comes from a family of professional theatrical people, recently left the legitimate stage. She had appeared in the Greenwich Village Follies, Passing Show, Texas Guinan Padlocks in New York, George M. Cohan's production and others.

WARD OFFICIAL FACES BOARD

Leroy Smith, a registrar of the Sixth District of the Third Ward, had been summoned today to appear before the Registration Commission at 2 p. m. Tuesday to explain methods of taking affidavits of persons claiming inability to write.

Pending Smith's appearance, the commissioners held in abeyance a motion made yesterday by Donald Anderson, attorney for the Bar Association's election fraud committee, to strike from the list of qualified voters, the name of George Captain.

The registrars' book indicates Captain swore he was unable to write. The affivadit was missing from the records.

The commissioners also summoned four voters for questioning about multiple authorization of orders for tax receipts. They are Joseph Rabinovitz, Pauline McDonald, Ella Hays and Edna High.

The board declined a motion from Anderson to strike from the voters' list, the name of Mrs. Bessie Fromm, 819 Wylie avenue, because an affidavit concerning her age was missing. Max Fromm, her husband, explained to the commissioners he was a member of the district registration board on last election day and prepared an affidavit that his wife signed for authority to vote on age.

PACT BACKERS TRY TO WEAR OUT FOES

Administration May Try Gag Rule if Long Hours Fail to Break Opposition

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Fearing public censure if the Senate is gagged by cloture on an issue involving the national defense, the Hoover administration today resumed its studied effort to secure ratification of the London naval treaty by silencing the opposition through physical exhaustion.

With a 12-hour continuous session ending at 11 o'clock last night, administration leaders reconvened the Senate at 11 o'clock this morning for another day-and-night session. The full brunt of talking continuously day and night was thrown on the little band of treaty foes, since all senators friendly to the pact were under strict instructions to sit silently pending collapse of the opposition.

GAG RULE IN SIGHT

Under this program, the administration confidently expected to break the heart of the treaty opposition by Monday night. If the treaty foes survive the test, gag rule probably will be applied.

A petition, requesting cloture and signed by 14 senators, has been held up by Senator Watson (Rep.) of Indiana, for the last three days. He has told other senators privately he will not sponsor it unless there is no other means of securing ratification of the treaty.

The petition, if introduced, would have to be voted on two days later and if two-thirds of the Senate approved it, debate thereafter would be limited to a single hour for each senator. This would bring a vote within a few hours.

OBSTACLE TO CLOTURE

The trouble which the administration faces in invoking cloture is the fact that it never has been applied to any measure before the Senate which involved the National defense. It has been invoked on numerous occasions to silence filibusters against legislation affecting a community or a governmental department, but never on so grave an issue as a treaty fixing the status of the American navy.

The treaty foes, however, faced a hopeless task. The brunt of the fighting fell on seven senators—Johnson (Rep.), of California; McKellar (Dem.), of Tennessee; Copeland (Dem.), of New York; Moses (Rep.), of New Hampshire; Hale (Rep.), of Maine; Oddie (Rep.), of Nevada, and Blaine (Rep.), of Wisconsin. Johnson and McKellar have held the floor longer than the other five combined.

These two senators plugged every gap in debate, which, unless closed, would have resulted in a vote. It was only a question of time of how long these seven men could carry on their one-sided fight against a Senate overwhelmingly in favor of the treaty.

Phantom Outlaw Wounds Rancher

WHEATLAND, Wyo., July 19.—(AP.)—A masked rider who is conducting a reign of terror in the rugged Laramie peaks region of Wyoming appeared again yesterday and shot and wounded Charles Adams, 20, a rancher. Despite a wound in his shoulder, the victim pursued the masked man, who habitually rides a white horse, for several miles. Posses have been sent into the hills in search of the phantom range outlaw.

Boy Fears to Tell Of Pal's Drowning

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., July 19.—(AP.) — Apparently fearing he might be punished, John Meredith, 5, waited until last night to reveal that a companion, Robert Payne, 5, had disappeared in the waters of Big Grave Creek, near here, early in the afternoon while the lads were wading. The body of the Payne boy was found at the bottom of a six-foot "sink" hole after the Meredith child had led officers to the spot where he was last seen.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—(AP.)—William Burkhart, 22, bookkeeper, was convicted of murder last night by a Superior Court jury, which recommended he hang for the shooting of his wife, Anne McKnight Burkhart, actress, March 24.

Burkhart was charged with killing his wife, from whom he was estranged, after efforts for a reconciliation failed.

Blue Law

What Outstanding People Think Of It

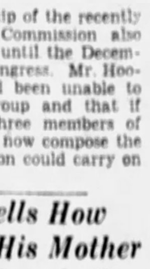
DR. A. L. LEWIN, member of Pittsburgh Board of Public Education. If we are to make progress our laws should reflect the spirit and needs of the times. We are not living in 1794 and we cannot apply the laws of that age to 1930. If we attempt to do that we are retrogressing. If we are progressive we must have progressive legislation. The regulation of Sunday observance by this time-worn law is entirely unsuited to the present day and it should be amended so that complete opportunities are given to our citizens, and particularly to our children, for wholesome amusement on Sunday. They should be given every opportunity to indulge in sports. I would like to see Sunday a day on which people should be happy and the relaxation of our law to permit them to seek the proper forms of recreation would be conducive to happiness.

Dr. Lewin

MRS. FELIX B. SNOWDEN, tennis and golf champion of Pittsburgh. I think it is a splendid idea to advocate a change in our laws so that greater latitude may be allowed for Sunday sports and amusements. I do not see any reason why the people should be restricted in their desires for Sunday recreation. It would not conflict with the religious observance of the day. Sports on Sunday afternoon are not out of harmony with attendance at church in the morning.

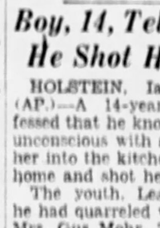
Mrs. Snowden

FRANK WILBUR MAIN, of Main & Co., accountants. The sentiments of the people is overwhelmingly for modification of the present laws regulating Sunday observance. There is no question of that, in my opinion. I believe the law should be changed in conformance with that sentiment.



F. W. Main

DR. HARRY M. GOEHRING. The Blue Law is more antiquated than the one-horse shay. We are riding in airplanes today. The mediaeval instinct which held in horror many customs of today has no place on our statute books. The health of the masses of the people is retarded just so much as they are deprived of recreation on the one day of the week they have most opportunity for it.



H. M. Goehring

HOOVER DELAYS NAMING BOARD

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(AP.)—Doubt was expressed by President Hoover that nominations for the reconstructed Tariff Commission would be sent to the Senate for confirmation at this session. Pointing out that the six members of the commission are to represent both parties, that they must represent different regions of the country and fill other requirements, the President said he would need more than two or three weeks in which to form the commission.

The membership of the recently created Power Commission also may be held up until the December session of Congress. Mr. Hoover said he had been unable to complete the group and that if necessary the three members of the cabinet who now compose the Power Commission could carry on until December.

Boy, 14, Tells How He Shot His Mother

HOLSTEIN, Ia., July 19.—(AP.)—A 14-year-old boy confessed that he knocked his mother unconscious with a brick, dragged her into the kitchen of their farm home and shot her to death.

The youth, Lester Mohr, said he had quarreled with his mother, Mrs. Gus Mohr, 35, and that he threw bricks at her. One of the bricks knocked the mother unconscious, the youth confessed, and he dragged her into the kitchen and shot her.

Ghostly Noises in Home Traced to Trapped Bird

It took four days for members of the Shoemaker family to discover just what caused the mysterious rustlings in the hot air pipes in their home at 103 Washington avenue, Bellevue. Mrs. C. R. Shoemaker first heard the noise in the chimney. Later other members of the family heard the scratching inside their bedroom walls and finally it was traced to the furnace in the basement.

Mr. Shoemaker, his wife and other members of the family stood in the basement Thursday night. They could plainly hear some flapping and scratching in the firebox. When the door was opened, out walked a black pigeon, blacker because of the time spent in the furnace.

Mrs. Shoemaker said they gave the bird a bath and something to eat and yesterday set it free from the front porch. The bird, a homing pigeon, probably fell into the chimney on Sunday of Monday.

Polite Constable Seeks Re-Election

TACOMA, Wash., July 19.—(AP.) — Tacomans read the familiar campaign slogan "If you want to be arrested in a courteous, pleasant manner, elect me." In every election since 1916 it has brought victory to Constable George P. Chapman. He has announced he would seek re-election.

Tax Collector Dies Of Auto Injuries

LINGLE KILLING SUSPECT HELD

CHICAGO, July 19 — (INS) — Tommy Abbott, a gangster sought since the gangland murder of Alfred (Jake) Lingle, racketeering reporter, was to be questioned at the state's attorney's office today.

Abbott, captured with his wife last night following a 10-mile chase through city streets, has been sought as the actual killer since the Lingle assassination, according to authorities. He was also wanted for the attempt on the life of Jack Zuta, who was shot at while driving through the downtown district under police protection.

A second important development in the Lingle investigation was the announcement by State's Attorney John Swanson that he had located a woman eye-witness to the murder of Lingle, who can identify Lingle's assassin.

Warfield's Illness Brings Peace With Belasco

NEW YORK, July 19.—(AP.)—The serious illness of David Warfield, from which the 63-year-old actor now is recovering, has been the means of healing a breach of long standing between Warfield and David Belasco.

Some years ago the actor whose portrayal of "The Music Master" took Broadway by storm and the white-haired producer who staged many of his plays came to a parting of the ways. Broadway understood the two no longer spoke to each other.

Then Warfield underwent an operation in April and his condition was reported as critical. Belasco hurried to a florist and on to the telegraph office. Flowers and messages, expressing hope for his recovery, reached Warfield's bedside. In return came a friendly message from the actor.

Warfield is "getting along famously," it was said today. He now is allowed to see his friends and expects to return to his home next week from the hospital where he has been a patient for three months.

700 SOLDIERS DEPART FOR TOBYHANNA

Field Artillerymen Going To Camp for Two Weeks' Intensive Army Training

Soldiers by the hundreds—700—beat a tattoo on Oakland and East Liberty streets as the One Hundred and Seventy-sixth Field Artillery left Logan Armory last night and entrained at East Liberty Station for Tobyhanna, Pa. Arriving there this morning, the guardsmen will make camp for two weeks, go through intensive training and take part in military activities of the United States Army range.

Already a vanguard has arranged for the camp. The only equipment the artillerymen took were their packs and musical instruments.

Leading the march out Bayard street, Craig avenue and other East End streets to the train was the Cervone's band, directed by Frank Cervone. Col. P. J. Schenck commanded the unit.

The men gathered in the field behind the Logan Armory shortly before 7 o'clock last night formed and started their march. The outfit motorized left their guns and tractors behind them and will use other equipment already in the camp.

HARD COAL PAY PACT REACHED

NEW YORK, July 19.—(AP)—A new wage and working agreement between the United Mine Workers of America and the anthracite operators has been reached today. Peace which has prevailed in the district for more than four years will continue for five more.

The new agreement, which must be ratified by the operators, the largest of which were represented at the conference and the miners themselves, will go into effect September 1, superseding the old agreement which was signed February 17, 1926, ending the great coal strike of that winter. It is to run until April 1, 1936.

The miners have been called into convention August 4 at Scranton. Their approval of the pact is expected.

The agreement provides for no decrease in salary.

A joint statement was issued by John L. Lewis, International president of the United Mine Workers, and W. W. Inglis, president of the Glen Alden Coal Company of Scranton, heads of the two delegations praising the agreement as a "remarkable contribution to the stability of American industry and American prosperity."

MOVIE SHOW TOMORROW HALTED

City and County Authorities Decide to Keep Hands Off; Appeal to Be Speeded

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 19.—Victory for the moment rests with the anti-Sunday movie element in Steubenville through the conviction here Friday of George Delis, manager of the Olympic Theater, who was tried for "desecrating the Sabbath" under Ohio blue laws by operating a motion picture theater on Sunday.

Whether the victory will stand depends upon the District Court of Appeals which will be asked by counsel for the Warner Brothers Theaters to throw out the verdict on the ground that Judge J. S. Paisley erred in his charge to the jury.

Judge Paisley, who discharged a special grand jury two weeks ago and reprimanded its members for failure to indict theater managers for opening their theaters on Sunday, told the Delis' jury that the law was clear, the evidence was clear and that "I expect you to bring in a verdict of guilty."

APPEAL FILED

The jury deliberated but 15 minutes, then returned a conviction. Immediate notice of appeal was given by Attorneys Nolan and Chestonay, representing the theater interests. The District Court of Appeals, however, does not convene here until December, and an effort will be made to have the case reviewed by the court in some other county.

In the meantime it is understood the theaters which operated one Sunday and were closed the next by order of Sheriff William Yost will remain closed, although performances have been advertised for tomorrow.

No further attempt, however, will be made by the city or county authorities to invoke the blue laws on other business concerns as was attempted last Sunday. Sheriff Yost said one Sunday was enough and that he was through with blue laws unless he received warrants to serve on violators.

SENTENCE WITHHELD

Representatives of the theaters refused to confirm reports that they would file affidavits against every place of business open in Steubenville next Sunday and force a complete closing of the city.

Judge Paisley withheld sentence in Delis case. He said:

"This is not a serious offense unless you persist in it. If the people who got you into this trouble will get you out, I will not be hard on you, but otherwise imprisonment will be your sentence."

Under the Ohio code of 1861, Delis may be fined up to $500 and sentenced to six months in jail or both.

Counsel for the theater interests said the fight had just begun and that they were prepared to carry the case to the Supreme Court.

GOLF COURSE OPEN

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., July 19.—Mayor W. F. Hurst announced that he will not interfere with the Sunday operation of a Tom Thumb golf course at Tuscora Park, owned by the city, which was purchased by the park commission for $2,000.

Both Mayor Hurst and members of council and the park commission patronize the golf course. There is no ordinance against Sunday operation, Hurst said, unless the blue laws are invoked.

CARNIVAL HEAD ARRESTED

Forman Murphy, alleged manager of a carnival at Frankstown and Hamilton avenues, was arrested by county detectives last night on a warrant sworn out by John Fetzko of South Negley avenue, the detectives reported. They said Fetzko told them he lost $200 in a paddle wheel game at the carnival several days ago.

The carnival closed by police as a result of the complaint will remain closed, the detectives declared. Police were on hand to see that none of the booths reopened.

Fetzko's first complaint against operatives of the carnival was withdrawn in police court after he was paid $45, according to detectives.

Although police officials yesterday were said to have been warned by Safety Director James M. Clark to stop all gambling at carnivals, a carnival in South Thirteenth street, supposed to have been closed, was running last night. Clark was expected to take definite action on complaints of citizens today.

LONG BEACH, Cal., July 19.—(AP)—Handsomely engraved on a gold plate a life membership in the Long Beach Flying Club was forwarded to Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., baby son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Naturally it was sent by air mail.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., July 19.—(AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh made two brief flights here last night. Going aloft in a light training biplane he climbed to about 2,000 feet and then "floated" the plane to a slow landing. Without leaving the cockpit he took off for a second flight, remaining in the air about 10 minutes. He was accompanied "by a friend, Oren Root."

Two Women Held On Drug Charges

Mrs. Daisy M. Waldron, 36, and her sister, Mrs. Pearl Dando, 33, both of Ellwood City, Pa., were held for Federal Court trial, charged with illegal possession of narcotics by a United States commissioner. Federal agents testified that when the two women were arrested Tuesday in Ellwood City by police, morphine and cocaine were found in Mrs. Waldron's handbag. Mrs. Dando has served two terms in the Lawrence County jail on charges of forging prescriptions for narcotics, agents testified.

AIRMAN'S ASHES TAKEN TO WILDS

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—(AP)—A quiet farewell was spoken over the body of Maurice Graham, veteran air mail pilot, while around the flower-banked casket in the Wee Kirk o' the Heather, Glendale, stood those who flew with him in war and peace, his family and his friends.

As darkness settled over the airport of the Western Air Express, Fred Kelly roared a plane down the runway carrying the night mail to Salt Lake City, and Graham's ashes back to the wilderness of deserts and mountains where he died.

Graham perished in a blizzard January 10.

Not more than six months his body lay in a canyon 32 miles from Cedar City, Utah. It was found Wednesday, six miles from the plane.

LIPTON'S YACHT OFF FOR U. S.

PORTSMOUTH, Eng., July 19.—(INS)—To the accompaniment of shrieking sirens and cheers of a mammoth crowd, the racing yacht Shamrock V, with which Sir Thomas Lipton hopes to win the America cup, left England today on a 3,500-mile voyage across the Atlantic to meet the American defender in the races off Newport in September.

The graceful vessel, as small as the ancient ships of Christopher Columbus, was in tow of Erin, Sir Thomas' palatial steam yacht. The racer's sails will not be unfurled until she is out to sea. The Erin will act as escort.

Due to an attack of lumbago, Sir Thomas was unable to bid farewell to officers and crews of both vessels. He will cross the Atlantic by liner, meeting Shamrock V in New York.

Motorcycle Officer Hurt Chasing Auto

Motorcycle Patrolman Michael Corcoran, of East Pittsburgh, was bruised and lacerated last night when his motorcycle skidded while he was chasing a speeding motorist in Linden avenue.

As Corcoran turned into Bessemer avenue, the cycle skidded on the car tracks, throwing him off. He was treated at the office of Dr. Albert Trevaskis. A finger was broken on his left hand.

WIFE'S DIVORCE PLEA DENIED

Although stating that the evidence showed the husband drank excessively and used profane language to his wife, Judge George A. Moore in refusing a divorce to Mrs. Mary J. Winter, 23 West Bell Crest road, Brentwood, from William J. Winter, declared sufficient proof to show the husband made her life intolerable was lacking.

The winters have been married 37 years, since April 12, 1893. They parted May 15, 1929. Judge Moore's opinion reads:

"She was not a model wife. Credible testimony showed she often provoked the respondent. On the other hand, while his acts and language subjected her to mental anguish, it was not proven that he made her life burdensome."

RIDERS ESCAPE IN CAR FIRE

A dozen passengers on a Wilkinsburg-East Pittsburgh street car were forced to flee last night when the car caught fire in Linden avenue, East Pittsburgh. An overheated motor is blamed for the fire.

Flames and smoke poured up through the floor of the car causing the passengers to leave in haste. No one was injured. The blaze was quickly extinguished and service resumed.

Woman Farm Tenant Held in Man's Death

NORRISTOWN, Pa., July 19.—(AP)—Mrs. Antoinette McCarris was committed to the county jail yesterday without bail after a coroner's inquest charged with the murder of Joseph Lee, 27-year-old farmer, July 4.

Lee and Mrs. McCarris, who had left her husband, were tenants on a farm near here. He was killed accidentally, she had insisted, when she fired a shotgun at the request of her children "to make a noise on the Fourth." At the inquest, County Detective J. K. Bourher said the woman's story of accidental shooting was untrue. He declared he had learned she was jealous of Lee's attention to another woman.

COURT TO RULE ON RECEIPT

Whether a tax receipt, alleged to bear a forged signature which Mrs. Mae McKim testified had been given to her by a Volpe worker on election day in Wilmerding last November, is to be permitted in evidence in the Wilmerding election contest will be decided in an opinion by Judges Frank P. Patterson and Samuel H. Gardner in a day or two. The point was argued at length in Common Pleas Court by Attorneys O. K. Eaton and John D. Meyer.

The Wilmerding contest testimony is being taken before Examiner Thomas J. Prather, who adjourned the hearing a few days ago to allow the tax receipt matter to be determined by the court. It came up in the division of the contest in which S. B. Brodie and J. R. Dixon are contesting the election to council of Charles H. Ray and James Volpe.

It had been testified that Volpe Wilmerding political boss, had boasted that he had procured $700 of tax receipts, but Volpe, on the stand, denied this and said he only got $70 of receipts on written orders as allowed by law. Attorney Eaton argued that the Mrs. McKim receipt testimony was not proper rebuttal evidence while Attorney Meyer said the evidence was proper answer to Volpe's denial.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Mrs. Davies Weds in Paris

Several more small parties and luncheons are being given this week and they will probably continue next week and all through July, for that matter because no matter how many people come and go there are still plenty of folks left here in the city or in Sewickley summer homes to keep the social ball rolling. And today has its quota of travelers too but even travel news is becoming uneventful and soon I will be telling you about the busy whirl of festivities in the summer resorts. Formal affairs are just beginning in the Pittsburgh colonies of the resorts but I will tell you about that later on.

Just here before I chat about parties and travelers I want you to know about a wedding of interest to folks here and in New York. Mrs. Emily O'Neill Davies, who is the daughter of the late Eugene M. O'Neill of Pittsburgh, became the bride of Horace Chase Stebbins of New York in Paris, France, yesterday. The Rev. Shepard Billings of Groton School, Groton, Mass., officiated in the Hotel Gritton. The Stebbinses will tour the continent before returning to New York to make their home. Mrs. Sigourney Thaxter, the former Emily O'Neill Davies, you will recall is the daughter of Mrs. Stebbins.

* * *

In New York on Wednesday another wedding of social importance took place when Jewel Lowry Jarvis, daughter of the William Rice Jarvises of South Graham street, became the bride of Andre Petrovitch Maximoff, son of the late Hon. Pierre Vassilovitch Maximoff and of Mme. Juliette de Maximoff, of East Eighty-first street, New York. The Hon. Pierre Vassilovitch Maximoff was the privy state councilor to Nicholas II and Russian minister to Egypt, Montenegro and the Argentine.

Wed in Gotham

The bride is a graduate of Winchester School and Smith College, class of 1927. She spent her junior year in Paris studying at The Sorbonne. Mr. Maximoff graduated from Yale College in the class of 1927, and from Yale Law School in 1929. He is a member of Psi Upsilon, the Elizabethan Club and Cotton Court. You will remember their engagement was announced in December.

In August Ahmic Lake will attract Mr. and Mrs. Louis Willard and their son, Louis, Jr., of Sewickley.

A ruling in Congress organization requires that each director give two days' board work to the Congress every month and absence from successive meetings without acceptable reason necessitates resignation. For this reason no board member may serve as an officer of a department or committee. FILMS TO GET DE FOREST AID

NEW YORK, July 19.—(AP)—Dr. Lee DeForest plans to move his General Talking Pictures Corporation to Hollywood by January 1 and devote his time to laboratory work on devices used in the motion picture industry, television and ultra-short wave radio.

Dr. DeForest, president of the Institute of Radio Engineers, is the inventor of the first three-element vacuum tube. In Palo Alto, Cal., in 1922 he first detected his vacuum tube could be made to oscillate and generate high-frequency currents. Today this property of oscillation is the basis of all broadcasting.

He believes the ultra-short wave field will produce some of the greatest scientific advances.

Americans Spend Too Much, Says Gloomy Dean

LEEDS, England, July 19.—(AP)—The Very Rev. W. R. Inge, known to all England as the "gloomy dean" of St. Paul's Cathedral, in a lecture at the Workyan conference here said that what Americans spent on luxuries in two years would pay off the British war debt.

By his estimate, $2,100,000,000 (about $10,500,000,000) is spent annually in the United States on amusement alone. He declared:

"People waste a tremendous amount—the French less than the English and the English less than the Americans. The real grievance of the working man is not that he is hard worked or poorly paid, but that he has to produce luxury goods of no real use, by which he loses his self-respect."

GET PULMOTOR FOR PICNIC

Safety for participants in water sports at the picnic of the Business Men's Association of the East North Side slated for West View Park Wednesday has led the Red Cross committee to provide a pulmotor for the day, according to Dr. C. Wilfred S. Kuhl

Distribution of novelties is to be made at the entrance to the park, according to S. Mallin, chairman of the novelty committee. They are contributions from various merchants of the district. Among other events planned is a Yo-Yo contest, supervised by Cornelius C. Pappert. The boy and girl winning the contest will receive valuable prizes, according to Pappert.

Wilfred S. Kuhl, of the Business Men's Association of the East North Side, is general chairman of the picnic.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(AP)—The Treasury has announced that the many provisions of the new tariff act make it necessary to establish a division of appeals and protests in the Customs Bureau. Charles Stevenson, at present supervising customs agent at Tampa, Fla., will be in charge. It will handle protests from importers regarding rates and from organized labor relative to imported commodities alleged to have been dumped into the United States and sold at an unfair price.

LONG WRAPS APPEAR AGAIN AFTER A SHORT ECLIPSE

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, JULY 19.—Long for a wrap is again a decree as well as a desire. After an eclipse of short duration the graceful, long wrap is again seen at smart functions and fashionable resorts such as Les Ambassadeurs and other smart restaurants in the Bois. Somehow, the wrap of long, flowing lines seems to capture the air of luxury always associated with formal events and perfectly appointed surroundings, and is was ideal to imagine that the pert little hiplength wrap would ursurp the important place held by the long wrap in our wardrobes and our affections. And so, if you are thinking of purchasing a wrap for next Autumn, you will be quite a la mode if you choose a long model cut on gracious lines. To the heel at the back and shorter with an upward trend seems to be the model of the moment, if the choice of very smart women here to be any criterion.

CAPED ENSEMBLES OF printed fabrics made their appearance at the recent Chantilly races and quite carried off the sartorial stakes. Such an ensemble is both practical and pretty, an ideal combination not only for race track wear, but for all general outdoor events not of a strenuous character. It is easy to imagine the Worth ensemble here sketched, cutting a dash wherever it may be, and it was worn with conspicuous success at the recent Prix de Diane run off which was before a fashionable crowd. Worth used heavy turquoise blue crepe with a small black design for both cape and frock. The pointed edges on the cape and skirt are interesting features and such trimming is used on many of the current costumes from this famous house. There are no sleeves, but flounced caplets cover the top of the arm and are just visible in the drawing at the front opening of the cape. The belt is of blue leather.

THE HANDSOME LONG caped wrap shown in the other sketch was part of an alluring ensemble worn by a guest at one of the smart Friday evenings that are featured at the recently reopened Ambassadeurs. Over a beautiful dress of cire white lace was worn a long, caped wrap of black ring velvet. Circular flounces, widening towards the back, edged the cape and wrap, conveying that touch of grace and animation so essential in a wrap of untrimmed black velvet. The softly draped shawl collar had long scarf ends.

ISTANBUL, Turkey, July 19.—(AP)—A protest against Turkey's recent refusals to permit excavations on the historic site of the Homeric city of Troy was sent to the Turkish government at Angora by 250 American professors and teachers of the classics. The scholars reminded the government that many famous pre-war excavations had not been completed and that the greater part "of one of the world's most important archeological sites" has been left untouched.

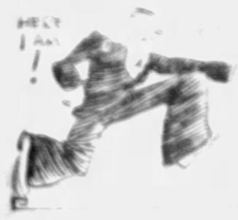
SCREEN REVIEWS, HOLLYWOOD AND NEW YORK BREVITIES

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

By WILLIAM PFARR



We know more about the "numbers" setters now than we ever did because we talked with a man who is a big fellow in that industry. He is one of a few who control the numbers business in one big section of the county. He said that his daily receipts were $9,000 full and we believed him, he hadn't made a penny profit in the six months he has been operating. Frequently he holds $30,000 to $70,000 profits for a few days but then a heavily played number will hit and he is even again. He has 25 young women on a staff tabulating the numbers. He has thousands of customers and the biggest sum he ever paid one person was $8,000.

We suggested that he could make money by laying off some of the bets on numbers which were big favorites. In other words if $100 were bet on one number, place $50 of that amount with another "numbers" operator. But he pointed out that there were so many bets that his staff wasn't able to tabulate them all before the winning number had been announced. Consequently he doesn't know until several hours after the announcement how much he has won or lost. He said too, that his "overhead" was terrific.

We know of a young North Sider, probably the squarest fellow in his racket, who opened up a "number" book some time ago. In two days he lost $4,500. He quit.

Don't, after reading of these two instances, get the impression that all the "numbers" operators lose money. Probably the great majority roll in wealth. Certainly no other racket is so safe from the law—that is, from the Federal government, which is the only government really feared. It seems that there is no law which entitles the Federal officials to prosecute the "numbers" men. And when a racket man finds himself safe from U. S. laws he is happy.

We have just met Walter Winchell's most devoted disciple, a young attractive woman who is considering quitting cigarets because smoking is so old fashioned. Nevertheless, when we saw her toss away a cigaret after the first match had failed we asked why. She said:

"Winchell wrote something once that you should always do that because acid or something gets in the cigaret.

GOOD MORNING, JUDGE

I've read a lot of nice things about you not being temperamental, but seeing is believing, sign on this line.

However, Raquel need not worry about Carlo for some time to come. She leaves shortly for location to play the lead in Cosmopolitan's Never the Twain Shall Meet, and as a final preparation has rented her Malibu Beach cottage. John McCormack, Colleen Moore's former husband, is the tenant.

Having been confined to her home for the past two months following a breakdown, Renee Adoree is well on the road to recovery. Two days ago she enjoyed her first automobile ride. According to her physicians her health is improving rapidly and they have hopes that she will be able to return to work in the near future.

SOCIAL EVENT

This writer went to the Ambassador Hotel as one of the large crowd who welcomed Gus Arnheim and his orchestra back into The Cocoanut Grove.

Many Hollywood notables were among the guests who completely filled the large room. Sue Carol and Nick Stuart were much in evidence all evening and did not miss a dance.

Sue Carol

Both are very adept on the floor and have won several dancing trophies at the Grove on different occasions. Arthur Lake was another enthusiastic dancer, and even went so far as to contribute an eccentric number during the floor show.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., was host to a large party, and an adjoining table was occupied by Sid Grauman and Joe Frisco. Sitting at ringside was Lillian Roth and Rose Perfect, and directly across from them, beautiful Catherine Dale Owen.

The entertainment was impromptu, and several stage and screen stars answered requests. Miss Perfect sang three numbers before the audience would let her go, and Pat Marbe answered several encores.

JUST A RETAKE

William Farnum and Tom Santschi were two interested spectators who watched Gary Cooper and William Boyd, the stage actor, maul each other for the famous fight scene in The Spoilers a few days ago. After it was all over neither of them would admit that it had topped the battle that they had waged 17 years ago when the story was first produced, although they both thought it was a first rate fight.

Farnum has fully recovered from a long illness and is planning to reenter pictures playing a leading role in Ten Nights in a Barroom. Santschi has also been signed for a part in the same film, which is to be made by an independent company.

Wandering around the lot I learned that Lewis Stone's option has been taken up and that he will remain with MGM for another year.

With most players who are not stars some outstanding performance is usually responsible for the renewal of a contract. But not so with Stone. He is one of the best character men in the business and can be counted for a brilliant performance in any part he is assigned.

His option has been taken up while he is away on a vacation. Following his work in "The Big House," he has been aboard his yacht cruising in Mexican waters.

FINE ACTING, ARTISTIC DIRECTION MAKE ALDINE FILM

By HOWARD I. BROWNING, Jr.

You won't enjoy seeing Good Intentions at the Aldine not because you will find anything new in the picture, although you will find a few thrills, but because of some excellent acting by stars and supporting players, some beautiful and artistic settings and photography.

Beautiful is Edmund Lowe's description of Edmund Lowe's personality, while what machine of man's creation is brilliant in Europe by day is Marguerite Churchill. Earle Foxe, Edmund Lowe's pal, is comic relief.

The love scenes and revelations of the characters are revealed by the dramatic personality of the silk-pajamaed tough and ready Edmund. His comedy is the most entertaining I have seen in months. Probably only he will remind you of Lady Macbeth.

WARNS GANGSTER

Foxe puts on the best dialogue scene with Lowe at Marguerite Churchill's bedside. Foxe is warning Lowe that his hour has come. Lowe is defying Foxe. Miss Churchill, injured during a hold-up ordered by Foxe, is unaware of the portent of the meeting, lasting only a few small talk.

For photography you will ask for little better than Lowe as described stalking the stairs from his death chamber, he collapses in the arms of his valet, Henry Kolker, at the bottom. Kolker has done a masterful portrayal of the faithful servant. Or you may like the footage.

ORDINARY PLOT

As for plot, it is Edmund Lowe's usual own. A crook, a smooth and handsome crook, in love, a crook trying to part from his mob, a wealthy young eligible in love with the same girl, the crook dying at the hands of his henchmen that the girl may have the eligible.

Lowe is the crook. Regis Toomey is the rival suitor. Foxe is the leader of the dissenting gang. The girl is the lovely Miss Churchill.

A Fox Movietone of Indian unrest gives some idea of the Indian trouble.

Stable Manners

I often pinched myself and wondered why
The gods had been so very kind to me;
I asked for love and you were their reply,
And what an answer you turned out to be.
You had a breathless beauty all your own,
A wistful way that lured me from the start;
Each phase of our romance, each overtone
Was dipped in beauty—strangely set apart.

But love that thrives on silly vagrant things,
Can die in dull and trivial ways as well;
And now a recollection of you brings
An episode to mind I loathe to tell—
Last night we dined—and though I'm not a snob—
Where did you learn to eat corn off the cob?

Gag

Jesse Block who will be seen at the Palace in August offers the one about the Jewish doctor who was born in Scotland. He joined a country club and on the first day he was told that if he had his name inked on the golf ball that it would be returned if lost and found.

"So all right," he said, "put down on mine ball Ginsburg, plizz."

The man in the golf supply shop wrote his name on it.

"Hmmmm," he hmmed "dots dandy, would you also plizz put dom M. D. after mine name? I'm a doctor."

"Be glad to," said the fellow as he added M. D. to Mr. G's tag.

As Mr. Ginsburg inspected the finished product he cooed:

"Would you mind doong me one more favor plizz?"

"Of course," said the man, now what?"

"Put dom hours 10 to 3."

Flip Crack

Jack Benny of "Vanities" who wasn't arrested because they didn't know him with his clothes on, says that things are getting worse in Chicago.

"I just hear," he bellows "that the gunmen out there have given the Chicago police 24 hours' notice to get out of town."

'Always Belittlin'"

And Bert Lahr of George White's Flying High show has joined the army of finger-pointers now that Earl Carroll is in trouble again. During the performance Kate Smith hastens on stage and excitedly cries:

"Can you tell me the quickest way to a police station?"

"Sure," says Lahr, "join Vanities."

Which Reminds Me—

That Mr. Carroll has an amusing blackout in his revusical which has already received printer's ink here. It is the gag about two little girls who are toying with mud in the street. A passerby pauses and asks one child:

"What are you making?"

"I'm making Mark Hellinger," she says, meaning that she is making a picture of the Man Who Spells It "Monkies."

"Well, why don't you make one of Walter Winchell?" he asks.

"Ain't got enough dirt!" is the brat's reply.

A funny skit, at that, and it is received with lusty laughter. But what we started out to say was: People who live in courtrooms shouldn't throw sketches.

Enterprise

He runs one of the smartest of the local speakeasies in the 30s. The cuisine is excellent and the giggle water melts in your palate. The particular whoopee-makers are packing the place, which ran for nine months without enticing much trade.

"I cannot stand to see a cold place, a dead one," he was saying, "people won't come back to a place that is lifeless—and when a place is crowded it is gay—people like to look at others and wonder about them—and if they are celebrated they give the place tone and atmosphere."

Then he explained how he kept the place looking crowded. He keeps them at their tables by sending over a free round of something—which usually forces them to make another buy" to return the compliment, etc.

"But why do you close so early—at 1:30, and shoo everybody out?" we queried. "Because after 1 o'clock they start getting noisy," he answered, "and I can't stand drunks!"

Overheard

"Why don't you like him?"

"Because he's like that guy who kisses with his eyes open—he hasn't any cab manners!"

"What do you mean?"

"Oh, when he's got a girl in a taxi and she complains that she is chilly, he closes the windows!"

Quiteso, Quiteso

It is Benjamin Holzman's observation that when a New Yorker in Hollywood keeps writing back to New York about the grand sunshine and the beautiful orange groves, you can safely wager he is still out of a job.

Quietso, Quietso

Harry V. Wade of the Detroit Athletic Club rises to groan that a Stein Song in a prohibition republic is a great deal like giving the young winner of a spelling bee a big dictionary.

Of All Things!

Harpo Marx of the amusing Four Marxmen decided to holiday over the week-end at a fashionable and exclusive Long Island joint and wired for reservations. He received this reply:

"We are holding a reservation and assume you are Gentile."

When Harpo arrived there he signed his name in the register this way: Harpo McMarx."

Incidentally

George M. Cohan, who is as Irish as Chauncey Olcott, once dealt with the same sort of hotel management. Several years ago Mr. Cohan wired to a spiffy Lake Placid place for reservations for himself and family. He got this reply:

"We cater only to Americans."

To which Mr. Cohan responded by telegraph:

"You thought I was Jewish and I thought you were gentlemen."

ALICE WHITE APPEARS AT ENRIGHT IN 'SWEET MAMA'

By KAYE GODARD.

The Enright this week has Alice White being a Sweet Mama. The plot of the picture isn't all it might be, being somewhat old and shopworn, but the acting is somewhat of an improvement.

It's the same old story of the innocent young boy, played in a rather efficient way by David Manners, who gets enthused about the prospects for easy money with a questionable gang. He leaves his position in a bank and starts to work in a night club whose owner uses his cabaret to cover up the real occupation of his men: rooting banks and other establishments.

About that time Goldie scrapes acquaintance with an officer of the law, discovers what kind of a crowd her Jimmie is getting mixed up with and then gets a job dancing in the same night club so she can watch all that goes on.

Complications become greater and finally there's a last-minute rush to the villain's apartment and the boy's life is saved as he is about to bid farewell to life. Whereupon he and Goldie fall into each other's arms and she tenderly calls him a "big bone."

The stage show is rather interesting. Chester Fredericks gets ridiculous capers, but he really can dance. Dorothy Busher does one of those trite Helen Kane imitations, and the "boop boop a doop" is just like all the rest of them have been since Helen Kane was first doing it. And then there's a team, Burns and Allen, who are lively and clever in their wise-cracking. Buddy Page enjoys himself as he always does and shows his ability on the xylophone.

A news reel, a cartoon comedy and Cyril Guthoerl's organ review complete the program.

John Weismuller Kennywood Feature

With the Jacks aerial acrobats remaining another week to give free afternoon and evening shows, Kennywood Park announces Johnny Weismuller in stroke and diving exhibitions at the park pool tomorrow. The Jacks appear each afternoon at 4:30 and each evening at 9:30. Kenneth Ross, clown, will stay as an extra feature for another week. Danny Nirella's band will be heard in four Sunday concerts in the park.

SHEARER, DRESSLER WIN LAUGHS IN PENN FILM

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Norma Shearer and Marie Dressler, strange as it may seem, make a prime comedy team. Just together on the screen, as they are in "Let Us Be Gay" in the Penn, they would be good for laughs merely in their contrast of characters. But the customers get more than that, far more. Miss Shearer, without doubt is the screen's light comedienne. Miss Dressler, it's premier low comedienne. Each is at her very best in "Let Us Be Gay," from the Rachel Crothers domestic comedy of the stage.

Miss Dressler invites her gay friend, Miss Shearer, to her estate. You see Marie is subtle, subtle as a falling brick, and she has a granddaughter engaged to be married and who is flirting with a divorced man. So the gay Miss Shearer is supposed to vamp the man away as Grandmother Marie doesn't want anything to interfere with that marriage.

TASK DIFFICULT

Miss Shearer is willing but finds her job difficult when the divorced man proves to be her ex-husband. Instead of vamping him she finds she has to repulse him, as he vows he always has loved her and insists upon another wedding. And that's the way it finally turns out. But not until after Grandmother's first subtle trick has been exposed, and she has to resort to another one, a more effective one.

LAUGHS ARE HEARTY

Miss Dressler drags the comedy out of her lines and situations by mis-handling them, but it brings hearty laughs. Miss Shearer gets hers spontaneously by being delightfully feminine. Rod La Rocque is the male center of interest.

On the stage is "Hit Bits of 1930" featuring Leavitt and Lockwood in comedy, stepping by Jones and Elliott, music by a stage band and dancing by the ensemble complete the presentation. Unlike the weather, it isn't so hot. Better is the overture, directed by David Peretzki. Poet and Peasant, the cordial reception of which brings "The Moon Is Low" as an encore. Wild Oscar's organ logue also amuses.

Don't delay arrangements for your summer home. See the cottages, houses and apartments offered for sale and rent in tomorrow's Classified Section.

Will Rogers Says:

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 19.

I got a great scheme for universal peace in this United States of Europe, that Briand is forming in Europe, with 20 nations in it, to be run like our 48 states are. Well, here is the scheme.

Have them adopt prohibition and that will start 'em all arguing over it so much that it will get their minds off war. You can't fight and argue prohibition. It would make you useless for anything else on earth. Yours,

WILL.

P. S.—And if this friendship of nations works over there, let's put Arizona and California in it. We can't get 'em to work with our bunch.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Even in Love, Honesty Is The Best Policy

Falling in love generally means plenty of trouble—
But falling out is apt to be a hundred times worse.

Yesterday he—or she—was the one shining miracle that made life worth while. Today she—or he—is just an ordinary human mice enough, of course, but you wonder what on earth you ever saw in em.

What are you going to do then?

Pretend you're still in love?

Try to stick it out because he's such a dear fellow you can't bear to hurt his feelings—or she adores you so that it would kill her to know the truth?

Or tell the truth and risk the consequences?

That's Muriel's problem . . . and maybe it's yours! When Muriel first met Burke she thought he was the answer to a maiden's prayer. I suppose that much of her excitement was simply tickled vanity because she had won her hero in the face of a lot of competition. But—whatever the motive—she thought she'd found her Pale. So apparently did Burke. They became engaged.

And now—oh listen!

"Dear Sally Martin:

Please help me. I'm at the end of my wits about my problem. I'm so worried that I just don't know what to do. The trouble is that if I do what I want to do, I'll hurt someone else terribly, and I don't know which way to turn.

You see when I first came here I met a young man 10 years my senior. He is a nice fellow and has been simply wonderful to me. He isn't good looking but he's popular. Lots of girls have been anxious to go with him, but since he met me he hasn't paid any attention to any of them. He's a straight shooter and has a good job and a nice machine.

I was wild about him for a while . . . or thought I was anyway. I'm beginning to wonder now just what it was I fell for him. I surely thought it was love. I neglected my school work (I am a sophomore in college) when I met him. I thought about him so much.

"To make a long story short, he kept coming to see me every night, and the feeling we had for each other seemed to deepen. A year passed, meantime, and to me this feeling of love seems to have worn off, but he never tires of me. And he always tells me how terribly much he cares for me. Sometimes he asks me if I still love him as much as I did, and I get just to the point of telling him the truth, but when I see that look of humble adoring love and trust in his eyes, I just can't do it.

I did venture to say once that I didn't know just how I felt about him, but I was never more sorry for anything in my life. And he tells me now that if I ever say a thing like that again he'll leave the state and he'd never trust a woman again as long as he lived, if I quit loving him.

"I don't know what to do, Sally . . . and the worst of it is that we got engaged secretly last summer. You don't know how much that means to me as a friend . . . and how perfectly impossible it is for me to hurt him. But I just can't bear the idea of marrying him when I don't love him.

"I don't know how to tell him that what I feel for him is only friendship. He is too much of a fine man to be fooled or kidded along. But what can I do? What shall I do? I have thought about it so much and thought how terribly Burke would be hurt that I've decided to tell you the truth about it all, and let you scold me or advise me whatever I need. My mother doesn't know about it all. She lives several hundred miles from here. So . . . well, I just can't write to her. Please help me!

"MURIEL."

What'll you do? You say you want to be fair to him. You say you want to protect his happiness and keep his career from going on the rocks. Do you really mean it? Then tell him the truth!

You're afraid you'll ruin his life if you do? Get this straight, lady—you'll ruin his life if you don't.

You may imagine that you could marry him, out of pity—and remain patient and gentle and sweet, in spite of your hidden hunger and aversion. Don't kid yourself! Love can't be faked. Dislike will out, even quicker than murder. And no one has such a nose for the truth as a lover.

This man might be happy with you for a few days, or a few weeks, but he'd inevitably sense your lack of affection and resent it. He may feel bitterly hurt if you tell him the truth now . . . But if you go on and marry him under false pretenses, he'll feel robbed and tricked . . .

Then he'll forget that he almost forced you into marriage with his pleadings. He'll see only that you don't give him the love he wants . . . and he'll inevitably come to hate you. And you'll resent his lack of appreciation of the sacrifice you've made, and hate him!

Why not leave town? Go and visit your mother. That'll give him a chance to be used to being away from you, and you can break with him gently. But break!

Don't let spinelessness force you . . . and him . . . into a frightful tragedy.

THE GIFT OF HEAVEN—SUNSHINE

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

No wonder the sun is worshipped. Sunflowers turn to him. The bones of little children strengthen and straighten in his light. The girl with the little bones in her back aching and stiff with bending over a desk long hours for years lies in the sun on her face and finds pain gone and limberness marvelously returning. Old people live a bit longer and that bit more serenely for the dazzle and warmth of the sun. Without him there would even be no rain, his gentler but mighty son. But don't forget what the Englishman in the tropics knows. When you head south for southern suns the sun is good medicine, but strong medicine and especially if your small child is a blonde. Don't let him play too long in His Majesty's fiery eyes without the coolness of a light hat on his tow head.

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

Don't Neglect Puffiness or Swellings

DR. COPELAND

Fortunately serious cases of edema are not common. But the importance of the disease must not be overlooked. It is a condition in which there is a swelling or puffiness in some part of body. There is an increased amount of fluid in the tissues. It is in a sense a kind of dropsy.

The underlying cause must be found. So far as it is understood by the medical profession, it appears to come from some change in the condition of the blood, and in consequence, overfilling of the blood vessels.

The walls of the blood vessels are very thin and to some degree porous. In the congested area because of the overfilled vessels the less dense portion of the liquid serum is forced or squeezed through the walls. It lodges in or between the tissues, causing them to swell and harden. The symptoms depend on the quantity of the fluid.

There are various diseases that have edema as a symptom. Persons who have heart or kidney trouble usually have it. In certain stages of Bright's disease, the puffiness appears under the eyes or in the legs or ankles.

Those who have anemia, with low blood pressure are apt to have edema. It often occurs during pregnancy and it is a symptom in hardening of the arteries, as well as in neuritis, neuralgia, or other diseases of the nervous system. Indigestion may bring on hives, with considerable edema.

Edema of the lungs is a serious thing. It is usually present in pneumonia. There is a marked increase in the blood supply in the blood vessels of the lungs. This congestion is the first step in the process of edema. It is then that a leakage of fluids into the air cells of the lungs takes place.

If all the air cells of the lungs were to be filled suddenly with this fluid, death would be as immediate as in drowning. However, such cases are not common.

Even if the attack is mild, the symptoms may be severe. There is a sense of tightness in the chest and the patient pants for breath. There is coughing and a frothy expectoration. The cough becomes constant and blood may be expelled.

It is natural that the patient should be frightened and excited. This adds to the congestion. Paleness, cold perspiration and weak pulse may be observed. Noisy breathing is a symptom in such a case.

In cases of simple edema, when the swelling of the lower limbs is troublesome, rest and elevation of the limbs is likely to give some relief. Sweating, hot baths and certain drugs are employed by the physician.

Even if the condition does not cause much discomfort, it should not be neglected. Every case should receive good medical care.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Loves Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary Tells Madge About Her Heart Worries

Was it possible that Mary meant to tell me about the letters which had so upset her and Noel and as a result had worried the rest of us responsible for the welfare of the betrothed young couple? I knew that Dicky's temptuous young niece would confide in me before anyone else, and I returned the significant pressure she had given my arm as she made her proposal to divide our little party into two opposite camps for the holly gathering.

"I think that's a splendid idea, Mary. But I'm afraid we're beaten before we start. It's three to two, you know."

"You bet your boots," Junior shouted, and capered over to Mrs. Ticer and grabbed her hand.

"Please hurry up," he urged. "We want to beat," and from the other side of our comfortable neighbor Roderick echoed his cousin's importunity.

"Don't worry," Mrs. Ticer told them. "We'll beat easily, for I know all the best places. But you must promise to break the ways just as I tell you. We mustn't spoil the trees, you know."

"I know," Junior declared proudly. "Mums told me all about taking care of the trees and plants when I pick flowers. And we'll watch you and do just the way you tell us. Eh! Rod?"

"Sure thing," his cousin declared soberly, and I realized that this youngest of the Harrison boys was feeling himself at a disadvantage because his life with the Braithwaites had included little woods lore. But I had not time to spend in commiseration of him. Mary was surreptitiously tugging at my elbow, and as Mrs. Ticer smiled down at the two small boys I turned with my niece toward the opposite side of the little clearing.

She said nothing however as we walked across the uneven ground and was still silent when we reached the group of holly trees which had been our objective. But she was breathing quickly and I knew that it was not the short walk which was causing those almost panting respirations.

It was not my place to urge her confidence by so much as a word until she was ready to give it to me herself. I reminded myself of this sternly, for my impulse was to put my arms around her and ask her what was troubling her. Instead I began to cut twigs from the branches with the pruning shears I had brought with me for the laurel.

"These will be wonderful for the laurel, Mary," I said as I clipped and made a little pile of my trove at the foot of the tree.

"Marvelous," she agreed perfunctorily, her eyes on her own clipping shears. But when she had cut perhaps a dozen small branches, she looked across at Mrs. Ticer and the boys, already working deeper into the wood, and then shot an appraising glance at the underbrush beyond our cluster of trees.

"Suppose we try the trees on the other side of that underbrush," she suggested. "We can come back here later. We ought not to take too much from any tree."

"That is true," I agreed as readily as if I took her statement at face value, instead of realizing that she simply was camouflaging her intention of getting me away from the ears of the others.

I followed her through the underbrush, thankful when the vines caught at us that we had worn heavy clothing suitable for a woods expedition. On the other side the holly trees were large and heavy with berries, but as I expected, Mary made no move to pick them. Instead she walked toward a fallen log, and began brushing the vines and leaves from it.

"Please sit down here for a minute, Auntie Madge," she said. "I guess you know I didn't drag you through that mess of brush just to cut holly that we could get over on that other side just as well."

"Yes, I know that, child," I told her encouragingly. "And I am all ears, as Marion would say."

"Don't say anything about getting chilled, or about the ground being damp," she said. "I have on the thickest things, and I want to feel something cold. I'm burning up. Feel my hand."

I took it in mine and shook my head at her.

"You haven't any fever, Mary," I told her. "If you had, I'd rush you home and put you to bed. But your hands are cool, though your face is flushed. You are simply wrought up, dear. Tell me what's troubling you, and let's see if we can't find a remedy."

I put my hand caressingly on her head, and she caught it and drew it down convulsively against her throat.

"What would I do without you, Auntie Madge?" she choked. "I've been wanting to tell you about this ever since I came home, but I never could muster up courage, because—it concerns Noel, too, and I felt as if I ought not to discuss it without knowing. But he is so strange lately, and I am so desperate I just can't stand it any longer. Here!"

She thrust her hand into a pocket of her coat and brought out a folded letter which she handed to me.

"Please read that beauty and tell me what you think of it," she said.

Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When matching a complexion powder to the skin select one that is slightly darker in tone. A bit of rouge makes the florid complexion less ruddy. Women with white hair and fair skins will find a mixture of orchid and mauve becoming.

Heavy eyebrows impart a sinister expression. They should be thinned out properly, usually along the lower line. Hairs that unite eyebrows can be destroyed by means of the electric needle in the hands of a specialist. Properly done, no scars result.

The second toe is the longest on the foot usually. It gets a rough deal when the shoe is too short. When pushed under, it develops into a hammer toe which, unless corrected in time, must be amputated. The best treatment for corns and calluses is running in sand. Summer girls on beaches should shed sandals and rejuvenate their shoe-tired dogs.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

Women get "all worn out" scolding their children in a vain effort to make them behave. They get crabbed and old trying to push their husbands onto the chalk line, while the stubborn brutes hold back with all their might.

I wonder sometimes, why wives don't try music?

It was what occurred to the pied piper, and you know of his success. You can get a man or a child (they are pretty much the same) to follow a happy tune for the sheer joy of it, where they will balk at being yanked forcefully into the house to have the door bolted against them.

As a matter of fact doing one's duty isn't always fun. Often the thrill is a vicarious one that comes from a feeling of pride that you are the sort of person who doesn't shirk responsibility. But it's not exactly what you'd call happiness. But to do something because you want with all your heart to do it, even though it be a duty—that's different.

The child who does what it has to do because the alternative is a sound thrashing, can't be expected to get any great joy out of the performance.

I get letters from wives who, without a doubt, walk behind their men with a club and a stern expression. Lord, Lord! Squeeze some enjoyment out of that situation and you would be in the Lindbergh-Byrd class. No one ever did it before you.

It's not only more successful, its a happier business to lead your man. Imagine a picture in the family album, of you, Mrs. Wife, with a stick and an unyielding eye, herding your husband home. He'd go willingly if there was anything there that he enjoyed.

If a man goes home and can feel that once inside that door all his business cares will fall away, and there will be music and laughter, and no end of good will, you won't have any trouble getting him to come back as fast as ever he can. No lasso needed.

There are thousands of such homes, and if you have the other kind of house, think it over. You will have to figure it out by yourself, more than likely, being like you are, but it will be well worth your while.

Accepting Prizes

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—Is it good form to accept a bridge prize when you are also presented with a gift as honor guest? Or should it be given to the person holding next highest score?

2—Would it be all right to write the hostess a letter of thanks for her party and gift, even though you had thanked her personally the evening of the party? S. N.

1—When you win the first prize at bridge, it is good form (and certainly "reasonable") to keep the prize. And this is true even if there also is a guest prize. Neither one has anything to do, fundamentally, with the other.

2—Not only is this all right, but it is the only polite thing to do, and it requires a great deal of planning and generosity. Therefore, naturally, it should receive the deepest and most articulate expression of appreciation and thanks.

A Note of Announcement

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am to be married next month, but do not wish to announce the marriage until a month after the wedding has taken place. Is it proper to send announcements then, or should I just send an informal note to my friends? D. W.

Under these circumstances I believe that the informal notice of announcement would be in better form, would be less liable to criticism.

After-the-Theater Refreshments

When entertaining a young lady for the evening, is it bad form not to offer her refreshments after the theater, if the hour is rather late?

Horoscopes

Sunday, July 20

Sunday's horoscope shows the possibility of a short journey of some kind of minor change, but otherwise the energies may be turned to cultural or mystical things, with the mind disposed to be introspective and the general demeanor, even in social and domestic contacts, serious or solemn. There may be a pleasant recognition from elderly persons or institutions.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for some sudden change or journey or minor importance during the year, but accompanied by some small financial anxieties. The mind may be active in plans and schemes and disposed to be profound and practical.

A child born on this day may be disposed to many plans, constructive and practical, although of a rather utopian or visionary nature. It may be fond of change but should benefit through elderly persons and institutions.

Monday, July 21

Monday's astrological forecast is for great activity and initiative, with affairs stirring or seething in all directions. The faculties and energies will be high pitched and volatile and should be properly and calmly directed into conservative channels, lest they incite the plans and enterprises to a place or toppling over. With judicious handling there are excellent prospects of unusual success and achievements, but be cautious in launching new projects.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which the faculties and energies are stimulated up to high adventure and initiative. But unless these be calmly and conservatively managed they may o'ertop themselves and fall of their own impetus. It is a time of splendid opportunity for achievement and progress, but new ventures should be manipulated with precaution.

A child born on this day should be enterprising and adventurous, with excellent equipment for success and high attainments in many directions.

STEEL DECLINE CONTINUED IN JUNE

Output This Week Near 55 Per Cent of Nation's Total Ingot Capacity

By B. E. Tily

Developments of the past week indicate that recession in steel activity did not cease at the end of June as it was reasonable to suppose would be the case both on the ground of seasonal precedent and from the fact, widely commented on at the time that summer dullness stole over the trade two or three weeks earlier than usual.

Steel production this week has been at nearer 55 per cent than 60 per cent. Last week's rate was probably under 60 per cent so that there has been little decrease in the week but the chances seem to be that for the remainder of the month there will be some further decrease rather than an increase.

Passage of the middle of July throws some light on the recent question whether when summer dullness began earlier than usual it would end correspondingly earlier. The chances now are that it will not but rather that it will be prolonged at the other end. In several years in which there has been an autumn upturn there were signs of it by increased buying just after the middle of July. Such signs are lacking now.

GAIN EXPECTED

There are predictions that steel demand will undergo a material increase well before the end of the year but such predictions are far from universal. The earliest time mentioned is the middle of August. It is doubtful whether anyone who predicts an early improvement could furnish a satisfactory outline as to whence the increased demand would come. It would probably be necessary to fall back on general principles and refer to an improvement in trade at large. For that however there is little warrant at the present time.

No large line pipe orders appear to have been placed recently but it remains that producers are well filled for some time to come while there are large projects likely to keep them working at capacity into next year. There is however never any absolute assurance about line pipe until orders are actually placed as financing rights of way and franchises sometimes make difficulties. The total prospective capacity in line pipe would engage only between 5 and 10 per cent of the total steel making capacity probably nearer the lower figure.

CAR OUTPUT OFF

Automobile production is so very light this month that an increase next month is reasonably certain with perhaps a further increase in September but for the remainder of the year the automobile industry cannot possibly absorb steel at anything like its average rate of last year or the year before. In the best years automobile production is very light in the last two or three months.

There is no likelihood that the agricultural implement industry will be nearly as active in the second half of the year as it was in the first half. There are reports that too many implements were made in view of the rate of buying lately.

Fabricated structural work fully maintains its pace of early in the year and naturally can hardly be expected to increase when it has been doing so well already. It is now one of the best outlets for steel. Much steel is moving into general consumption in lines that cannot be studied in detail.

PRICES UNCHANGED

Steel prices have shown no quotable change in the last week and the market as a whole presents an appearance of a little more regularity than in June. This however is partly illusive as buying is almost entirely in small lots not likely to bring out special prices. The market is not under any really adequate test.

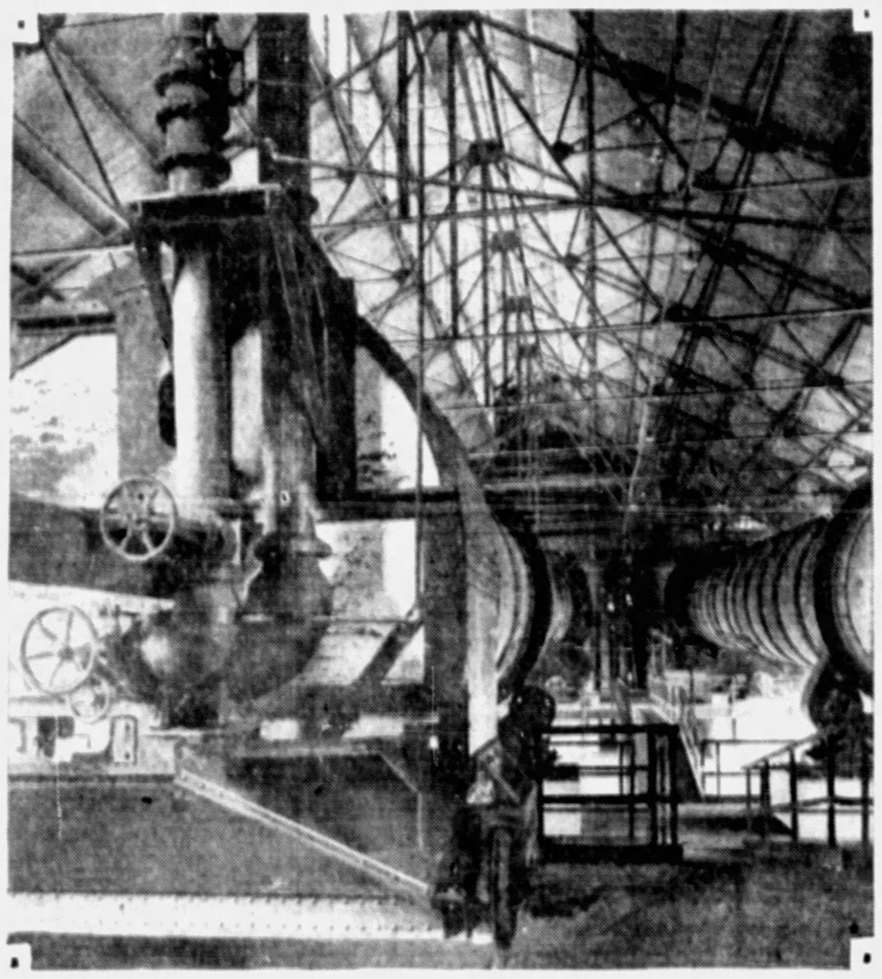
MODERN CEMENT-PRODUCING PLANT



KILN ROOM USED IN PRODUCTION OF CEMENT IN BASIC PRODUCTS COMPANY'S PLANT

Sinclair to Use More Pennsy Crude

Part of the new Sinclair refinery at Wellsville, N. Y., is now in use. The entire installation will be ready in the early autumn. The plant will have a capacity of 10,000 barrels of crude oil or 10 times the capacity of the original plant. Pipe lines serving the Sinclair refinery only will move Pennsylvania grade crude oil from more than 8,000 wells. The completion of the plant will put the company in a better position to meet the growing demands of the Eastern and Midwestern markets for a complete line of products made exclusively from Pennsylvania crude, which is the highest grade of oil and commands the highest posted market prices.

USE OF CEMENT INCREASED

The use of Portland cement has become so universal that it is found everywhere construction is in progress.

While this commodity is accepted by all as one of the most important products in modern construction few have a knowledge of the massive crushing, burning, grinding, conveying and storing equipment required to prepare it for use.

One of the most modern cement plants is that of the Basic Products Company, located on Neville Island, just outside of Pittsburgh, where Green Bag Cement is produced.

The giant kilns illustrate how massive the equipment throughout really is. These kilns are 175 feet in length and 10 feet in diameter. Slurry, of limestone origin correctly compounded by skilled technical experts, is delivered to these kilns where a temperature of approximately 2,600 degrees causes a chemical reaction and forms what is known as cement clinker.

In connection with these kilns coolers 80 feet in length by 8 feet in diameter receive the hot clinker and place it in condition for further preparation as cement.

The capacity of one of the kilns is said to be equal to about 1,500 barrels of Portland cement a day.

Considering the fact that Portland cement is one of few commercial products which must always fulfill rigid specifications of the American Society for Testing Materials, the low price at which it is marketed is only possible by producing it in large quantities such as these machines make possible.

Rail Dividends Larger for 6 Months

NEW YORK, July 19. Dividends paid on the common stocks of 30 principal railroads listed on the New York Stock Exchange in the first half of this year were 9.2 per cent greater than the dividends paid by the same roads in the corresponding period last year.

Of the 30 roads 13 paid more in the first six months this year than in 1929. Of the 13, increases were due to raises in the dividend rates in the case of six roads to an increased amount of stock outstanding in the case of five roads, to both of these causes in the case of the Baltimore and Ohio, and to an extra dividend in the case of the Lehigh Valley.

Payments by these roads on their common stocks totaled approximately $184,405,905 in the first six months of this year, compared with $168,936,097 in the corresponding period a year ago.

Plate Glass Output Below Last Year

Production of polished plate glass in June was appreciably below that of June last year, according to figures released this week by P. A. Hughes, secretary of the Plate Glass Manufacturers of America. During the month 9,128,216 square feet were produced, compared with 12,278,002 square feet in June of 1929. For the six months of this year a decline of over 7,100,000 square feet is shown as contrasted with last year's record first half year volume. The totals for the longer period were 66,367,375 square feet and 73,474,143 square feet, respectively.

GAIN SEEN FOR ALUMINUM

The aluminum industry continues to expand, according to the latest analysis of the Brookmire Economic Service, Inc. The report states that this industry is not subject to severe competitive conditions. Being in the hands of a few strong, well managed companies, production has been held close to consumptive requirements.

World production increased from approximately 80,000 metric tons in 1921 to 262,000 in 1929, each year during the period showing an increase. Production in the United States, for the same period, expanded from approximately 30,000 to 102,000 metric tons. The Aluminum Company of America, and Aluminium, Ltd. of Canada, formerly owned by Aluminum Company of America, are thought to control well over 50 per cent of the world production. The United States output controled by Aluminum Company of America, accounts for over 35 per cent of the world's supply.

There are several things which make it appear that consumption of aluminum this year will increase little, if any, as compared with 1929. Automobile output will show a recession. Copper prices have been reduced until substitution of aluminum will be checked. Reduced industrial operations will result in smaller demand from miscellaneous sources.

The long-term outlook for the aluminum industry, however, is exceptionally bright.

WESTERN UNION 2ND QUARTER BETTER

Half Year's Net Covers Dividend Requirements; Operating Expense Cut

NEW YORK, July 19.—While Western Union's six months' earnings showed a severe decline from those of 1929 and 1928, the second quarter's showing was considerably better than that of the first for the current year. The company did not increase its business to any great extent, but it did get a strong grip on expenses which helped to a great extent in making the improved showing.

In the first quarter of the current year the company made its worst showing in 15 years reporting net income of but $1,486,803 or $1.45 a share on 1,023,791 shares. Thus the $2 quarterly dividend was not earned by 55 cents. Incidentally this was a decline of 60 per cent in earnings from the like quarter of 1929.

$4.22 FOR HALF

The second quarter's earnings were equivalent to $2.77 a share compared with $3.81 in the corresponding quarter a year ago. For six months the company's net income aggregated $4,326,068 after charges, depreciation and federal taxes, equivalent to $4.22 a share. In other words progress in both earnings and reduction in expenses was sufficient to show the period's dividend earned with 22 cents to spare.

That Western Union's improvement during the year to date has been progressive is seen in the fact that in January operating income after expenses and taxes amounted to but $252,515 against $1,284,882 the previous year, a drop of 80.3 per cent.

SEASONAL TREND

As indicated before the first quarter's drop in net income was approximately 60 per cent, while the decrease in the second quarter from a year ago was but 27.3 per cent.

There is a seasonal quality in the company's earnings, and the second half of the year generally shows substantial improvement over the first six months. The annual dividend requirement of $8 a share therefore seems certain to be covered, with several dollars margin.

Net income for the first six months is the smallest total in many years. Against the $4,326,068 for this year is shown $7,622,589 last year, $7,305,158 in 1928 and $7,322,086 in 1927.

JULY BUSINESS DULL

NEW YORK, July 19.—The passing of the midyear spurt, marked by unusually high levels of building contracting and money turnover, has left business facing the full force of the usual July slackness, now emphasized by a depression year, says The Business Week in its report covering the week ending July 19.

Industrial activity, apart from building, is at the lowest level of the year, but general trade though slackening somewhat with the season, continues well sustained in comparison with production. The Business Index after touching normal for a brief period at the end of June, has receded, as expected, to 97.2 per cent, which compares with 100.3 last week and 111.1 per cent in the corresponding week last year. Further declines will probably be shown in the remaining of the month.

Commodity prices, except in key agricultural products, show greater steadiness here and especially abroad. The stock market is showing encouraging resistance to further liquidation at a time when it is least expected, and business sentiment has a better tone.

Big Gold Imports From Latin America

NEW YORK, July 19.—The report of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York on the movement of gold during the period from July 10 to 16, inclusive, showed imports of $6,331,000 and exports of $4,000,000. The imports consisted of $5,224,000 from Brazil, $1,000,000 from Uruguay and $107,000 chiefly from other Latin-American countries. The metal exported was shipped to France. There was no net change in gold earmarked for foreign account.

END OF CHEAP MONEY NEAR AT HAND

Seasonal Demand Likely To Cause Firmness But No Stringency Is Seen

NEW YORK, July 19.—Easy money conditions are reasonably certain to last for the next several months. However, indications are accumulating that the period of unusual and extreme ease that has prevailed since mid June has about run its course. The ruling rate of money in New York City reflected by 1½ to 2½ per cent call money and 2 per cent bankers acceptances is by no means typical of conditions throughout the country. With seasonal demands for credit and currency to finance crops and autumn business in the offing it is probable that surplus funds will soon start being withdrawn from New York for more profitable use elsewhere.

CHANGE APPARENT

Already a change is observable in banking opinion as to the rental value of money. Time money for 120 to 180 days maturity is extremely scarce and is being offered at 3½ per cent as against 3 per cent two weeks ago. Similarly the investment demand for long-term bankers acceptances has dwindled markedly, necessitating an upward revision of rates last week. Several large blocks of long-term bills were disposed of by banks last week and it is understood that further substantial offerings are overhanging the market. Meanwhile new acceptance financing is reported to be on the upswing. Another upward revision in acceptance rates is anticipated therefore.

PREVAILING RATES LOW

It is probably premature to say that the firming of longer term interest rates is a reflection of expectation of an early revival of business. Nevertheless, the opinion is gaining ground that this region will likely see the low point in industrial activity, while a more optimistic attitude towards the stock market is clearly evident. Entirely aside from the normal seasonal pick-up in demand for credit and currency, it seems likely that deflation of bank credit has been reasonably thorough and that the next move in credit volume will be an increase rather than a decrease. Money could firm up considerably from current levels and still be described as "easy."

SUPPLY FIRM FORMED

The Kissane Supply Company, recently incorporated, announces it is ready to give service to the general trade with a line of builders' supplies.

The personnel of the company is composed of men thoroughly familiar with every line of contractors' and builders' supplies and is well known in the field.

The company has a modern sand and gravel handling outfit, located at Sixteenth street on the Monongahela River, which assures an adequate supply at a central point.

A large warehouse on South First street is being temporarily used for general lines, such as cement, lime, sewer pipe and brick. Plans are being considered for more modern warehouse facilities. Truck equipment has been purchased and every detail arranged to insure prompt service.

Imports of Glass Register Increase

During the week ended July 12, imports of both plate and window glass into this country registered gains over the preceding week's volume, according to the latest unofficial compilations. Incoming shipments of plate glass for the week totaled 81 cases as against 71 cases received the week of July 5. In window glass, imports aggregated 2,481 boxes, 6,280 pounds, and 2,153 boxes, respectively.

WEEK'S TRADE DECLINES

Business for the week ended July 12 as indicated by the volume of checks presented for payment declined from the preceding period and was lower than the same week in 1929.

Wholesale prices in general declined but slightly from a week ago and showed a decrease of 14 per cent when contrasted with the week ended July 13 1929. Iron and steel prices as measured by the composite index showed no change from the week of July 5 but were 9 per cent lower than the same period a year ago.

Bank loans and discounts during the last week declined only slightly from the preceding period and were below the level of the corresponding week a year ago. The average prices of stocks remained unchanged from the preceding week but were lower than in 1929. Bond prices on the other hand showed gains over both comparative period. Interest rates for both call and time money reacting to the renewed stock market activity were higher than the week ended July 5 but were considerably below a year ago.

Local Broker Sees Higher Money Rates

Short term money rates continue easy. There is a tendency to switch from long term to short term maturies, indicating the belief in banking circles that the current low level of interest rates will not extend over many more weeks according to a survey made by Hill, Wright & Frew.

Business Leaders More Optimistic

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

BUSINESS HAS STARTED the third quarter of the year in the lowest state of activity since the December inventory period but there is a steadily growing sentiment among bankers and corporatioon heads that the worst has been passed and that the fall months of the year will be marked by a gradual but not sensational improvement.

The current tone of optimism is far different from the widespread whistling to keep up courage which was so general immediately after the October break in stock prices. At that time nearly every man of affairs who talked for publication inwardly felt that the smash would necessarily hurt business. He also felt, however, that it was a distinctly wrong thing to talk gloomily. He cherished the hope that, if enough could be said to bolster business courage, activity might be kept on an even keel or the violence of the depression might be reduced. Accordingly, interviews with the president of every corporation started with "business is fundamentally sound."

Outlook Improved

SINCE THAT TIME the change has been exceptionally noticeable. There has been less foolhardy shouting about how good business is going to be. The banker, the maker of steel or of building materials is perfectly willing to admit facts. He will frankly say that business is bad, that labor is poorly employed and that it is hard to make money.

He will not say that business is going to start being good tomorrow and will get better every day from now on. He will say, however, that he does not expect production to get much lower. He will discuss the decline in commoditty prices and express the belief that the bottom has been reached and that there are no factors which should carry quotations to lower levels.

Viewpoint Changed

MOST TYPES OF BUSINESS are in their seasonally dull periods. The composite man whom we are interviewing is not so foolish as to predict any immediate change in the situation until the later months of the year. He does not expect production and sales to regain over night the momentum which it took many months to reach in the last period of activity. But he does believe that business is about to start on an uptrend and that it may reach satisfactory proportions late this year or early next year.

This optimism is based on logical facts. The country has no large inventories to liquidate. The materials on hand which must be marked down in line with lower prices are fairly small in volume. Money is plentiful and cheap. These factors do not make good business but they pave the way for a revival.

Production at Low Point

BUYING POWER FLUCTUATES within certain limits. There are things which people buy in good times but which they are unable to buy in bad times. There is a definite limit, however, beyond which consumer requirements are not flexible. Prosperous people buy certain luxury types of foods but they always have to eat. People with plenty of money buy clothes a month or two before they actually need them but they always have certain minimum requirements.

There are no statistics which set forth just what the minimum of goods needed happens to be. Most business men believe, however, that the consumption of commodities is reaching this critical point below which it cannot go except under the most exceptional circumstances. Just as production surpassed normal needs last summer, it now seems quite probable that it has dropped below normal consumption. This belief underlies the recent predictions of conservative optimism.

PLATE GLASS QUIET

The seasonal lethargy of recent weeks in the market for window plate and other flat glass products continues to hold sway. Demand is low and production is at a low level even for this time of the year, according to the American Glass Review.

Notwithstanding this prevalent apathy, reflecting as it does the sub-normal activity in principal consuming industries, an undercurrent of optimism as to the outlook for early fall is considerably in evidence. Several factors have combined to bring about this feeling of reassurance. Chief among these are the growing evidences of a somewhat firmer tone to the market for both plate and window glass, resulting from the recent efforts toward stabilization and the prospects for a continued steady improvement in the building industry.

Demand for plate glass was unusually quiet the past week. Large automobile plants have shut down for two weeks, a portion of the jobbing trade is still in the midst of midyear inventories and mirror manufacturers are reported buying in relatively small quantities. Following resumption of production by the automobile manufacturers an early improvement in demand for this product should get under way.

Freight Traffic Below Last Year

The volume of freight traffic handled by the Class I railroads of this country in May this year amounted to 36,876,432,000 net ton-miles according to the Bureau of Railway Economics. Compared with May, 1929, this was a reduction of 5,269,075,000 net ton-miles or 12.6 per cent, and a reduction of 2,686,673,000 net ton-miles or 6.8 per cent under May, 1928.

Railroads Increase Train Speed in May

The railroads of this country established in May a new high record in the speed with which freight trains were operated, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics. The average speed of freight trains in May was 13.9 miles per hour, which represents the average per hour for all freight trains between terminals, including yard and road delays, an increase of one-tenth of one mile above the best previous record of 13.8 miles, which was attained in both March and April this year.

RADIO TO SHOW SMALL PROFIT FOR HALF

First Quarter's Deficit Wiped Out and Inventory Excess Sharply Reduced

NEW YORK, July 19.—Within a few weeks the Radio Corporation's six months' statement will be made public, the first report by the company since the end of 1929. The first quarter's statement was omitted with consent of the New York Stock Exchange because the unification plan with General Electric and Westinghouse was being worked out during the period, involving important capital and other changes in Radio Corporation's setup.

The first quarter was a period of disposing of $31,947,000 inventory left over from 1929. Much of this inventory was sold at heavy losses but the pressure of unsold inventory throughout the trade was lessened to such an extent that in the second quarter better prices were obtained for the balance of inventory that had to be disposed of.

NORMAL INVENTORY

Despite the red ink figures for the first quarter, the company earned a small net profit for the six months. Inventory position today is normal and operations are being conducted at a profit.

The six months' report will be more comprehensive than heretofore and will probably include a balance sheet giving effect to the changes in capitalization since the end of 1929.

Capital changes include 1,580,375 shares issued to the General Electric and Westinghouse in exchange of their interests in various Radio Corporation subsidiaries including all manufacturing activities. Besides this the Radio Corporation increased its "B" preferred issue to 1,500,000 shares from 813,365 to reimburse the electricals for $32,000,000 cash advances.

DEALERS STOCKS DOWN

The unification plans whereby the Radio Corporation through its subsidiary, the RCA-Victor Corporation, will do all the manufacturing for all its own subsidiaries as well as for General Electric and Westinghouse, who will sell radio sets at retail, have now been completed, and on August 1 the great Camden plant will go on a capacity basis and begin producing between 8,000 and 10,000 sets daily.

Dealers' stocks are getting low and orders coming into the Radio Corporation indicate that the tide has turned in the radio business with much better condition of things likely in the last six months of the year.

GLASS FIRMS MAY ENTER MERGERS

Consolidations of Several Companies May Develop In Future, Say Reports

If credence can be placed in numerous reports there are likely to be additional mergers and changes in glass manufacturing firms at an early date, according to the National Glass Budget.

Rumors are to the effect that there is quite an extensive effort being made to bring under one roof a number of firms engaged in the manufacture of containers. Another story is that there may be something doing in the flat glass industry. The latter statement however is not taken as seriously as is the first one mentioned.

It would not be surprising to hear at an early date that one of the plate glass companies would go to new interests in the industry. Efforts were being made during the week to complete the transaction.

TO BUILD PLANT

There seems to be quite a difference of opinion existing as to whether or not the proposed plate glass works will be built in Utah. Backers of the proposition are understood to be quite confident that the works will be erected. Others take the view that, with a productive capacity at present in the neighborhood of 220,000,000 square feet annually and a demand far below this amount, the advisability of building another works is decidedly questionable.

One of the large manufacturing firms of plate and window glass is understood to be looking for a location for a new plate works handy to the automobile manufacturing center of this country. When the proper city is obtained there is no doubt but what a very modern works will be erected which will perhaps supplant other works that are not so up-to-date.

A. P. I. Head Sees Firmer Oil Prices

NEW YORK, July 19 — F. B. Reeser president of the American Petroleum Institute said today that the crude oil situation continues to improve and that the present rate of curtailment in output indicates a substantial withdrawal of crude oil from storage. He added that the distributing division throughout the entire country continues to sell gasoline to consumers at prices that are not remunerative and that ultimately with the restriction of the crude supply coupled with proper refinery operations, a reasonable advance to the consumer may be expected.

PICNIC TICKETS GOOD AT STORE

Completion of plans for dancing among the 15,000 North Side residents expected at the West View Park picnic of the Business Men's Association of the East North Side Wednesday has been announced by H. W. Schmidt, chairman of the dancing committee for the picnic.

The small charge for tickets it is explained, will in reality be no charge at all. Receipts given with the tickets can be used for their face value on purchases in any store in the East North Side.

Schmidt claims this action was taken instead of making admission free because it will serve as a suitable check on the popularity of this amusement.

The Mysterious Number contest with prizes donated by the Sun-Telegraph, is ready to be put to work, according to W. A. Stahr of the Association. Plans for the contest call for numbered tickets to be given guests at the entrance to the park. Among the tickets will be a number of duplicate numbers.

It will only be necessary for holders of these duplicate tickets to find each other and appear at the clearing house in the dance pavilion to receive the special Sun-Telegraph prizes. Stahr predicts that the contest will be one of the most popular at the picnic.

According to W. A. Stoehr, the picnic is expected to be the largest ever held by the association.

ADDING to Milady's beauty has become one of the nation's major industries. Today there are salons and parlors where expert hands tend to the setting of Madame's coiffure, where agile fingers knead Madame's face in an invigorating massage, where scientific preparations renew the beauty of the hungry skin. It is all-important that you seek out the more reliable of these shops. That you entrust your greatest asset—beauty—to experienced hands. Thus, we suggest that you patronize those establishments who advertise in the Sun-Telegraph. Their reputation is solid. They are the masters of their profession. So that you may easily use their messages as a guide, we have grouped them every Sunday in the Society Section of the Sun-Telegraph. In these masseurs, barbers and beauticians you may place the utmost confidence. They are Sun-Telegraph advertisers, and are endorsed by the Sun-Telegraph.

COMMODITY DIP SEEN AS HELP TO TRADE

Stepup in Buying Should Follow Growing Value of Dollar, C. M. Wright Says

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

(Copyright, 1930, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, July 19.—Pessimism has been heightened unnecessarily by a partisan reading of the business trend of the last year.

Instead of maintaining an objective neutrality, observers of the fall in prices have participated in the wailing of the deflated bulls. Accordingly, Chester M. Wright of the American Federation of Labor does a service in emphasizing that the fall in commodity prices has favorable aspects too. He foresees a new era of greater purchasing power. He thinks that the lower cost of living which should result will step up buying power, the insufficiency of which caused the breakdown of prosperity.

Unquestionably, there has been a lag in the tendency of retail prices to reflect fully the setback in quotations in wholesale markets. The two leading mail order houses and others accordingly are performing a useful service in dramatizing the movement to a distinctly lower commodity price level. The mandate of the moment to business men is to avoid retarding the free movement of goods through maintaining unjustifiably high prices.

DOLLAR VALUE GAINS

Giving an optimistic interpretation to the readjustment which has stretched the consumer's dollar, Mr. Wright pointed out:

"Commodity prices have gone down 9.1 per cent since August, and the dollar, with which the American consumer goes to market, is constantly gaining in buying power. The customer walks up to the counter with a bigger dollar and the merchant looks over the counter to a new state of affairs. Mighty things have been happening and they have not by any means finished happening."

Discussing in Printer's Ink whether working men and women will be cheated out of the benefits of lower prices by a corresponding cut in wages, Mr. Wright remarks:

"Chief among the other developments which it is now possible to record as cheer to the merchandising world is the fact that wages, with a few exceptions, which move the bulk of the nation's commodities, are not going down. There are as many dollars to be spent today as there were in January, and they are more powerful dollars. It can be said with ample reason that we are entering a new era of buying power.

"To be sure, there will be some attacks on wage rates. Indeed, there have been some. But there is not going to be any such things as a general wage reduction effort, which means no decrease in the number of dollars available for the making of purchases. For this statement there is the highest authority. Within the last week it has been revealed that the question of wage reductions has been under consideration among those whose work fixes the policy in some of the nation's largest enterprises. The decision has been flatly that to reduce wages would be the sheerest folly.

OPPOSE WAGE CUTS

"One of the largest banking houses in the United States—a house that is heavily interested in enormous industrial enterprises—has said 'no' to the wage reduction proposition. An equally emphatic negative came from the head of one of the largest mass production enterprises. In the automobile industry there has been a sign or two of a wage cutting desire, but it appears highly improbable that there will be any general move in that direction in motors, though few industries have been hit harder than this."

Now that Wall street has sufficiently recovered its nerves to consider the new tariff on its merit, it is interesting to observe the non-partisan opinion of the Standard Statistics Company, which points out:

"While specific rate changes under the Hawley-Smoot tariff act probably have not increased, on the average, more than 20 per cent over those prevailing under the preceding law, and therefore are not considerable in terms of total foreign trade, any upward revision at this time is ill advised in view of the fact that, as a creditor nation, this country must encourage imports of materials as the only means by which foreigners (in the long run) can discharge their obligations. This is increasingly imperative because, as indicated by universally falling prices, domestic producers are overequipped and are in need of foreign markets to aid in disposing of their surplus outputs.

TRADE LOSS SEEN

"Instigated mainly to avowedly help agriculturists, benefits to the latter will be offset by increases in their living costs and by the tendency of foreign countries to impose retaliatory tariffs, where possible, and to shift their purchases to other countries. Coincident also with developing resources abroad, we believe that a lower range of farm prices is inevitable during the next few years, at least. Despite the possibility of rate readjustments in connection with the flexible provision of the tariff, it is our opinion that much of the injury done to our goodwill account with foreign countries is irreparable in the near term."

The present period of economic transition gives a marked advantage to the strong business factors who are able intelligently to read the economic signposts. In commenting on a survey of conditions made by 200 management engineers, John P. Sherman, consulting engineer, concludes:

"The present period offers an extraordinary opportunity for aggressive organizations with foresight and courage to outdistance their competitors. The executives who give careful thought to management and proceed with optimism will win over those who cling to old methods and are pessimistic."

Chicago Buying Brings Spirited Rally in Harvester

Chicago buying is reported to have been primarily responsible for the upturn in International Harvester, in which trading has assumed unusually brisk proportions. What may have happened to prompt the demand is not generally known. Both this stock and Case Threshing Machine were rather heavily sold in the last few months, coincident with the slump in prices for principal farm products, which it was contended would act to curtail demand for new machinery. Case has staged one of its not infrequent spectacular demonstrations, spurting for a big gain at the expense of a sorely trapped short interest.

On numerous occasions sudden activity and strength in Columbia Graphophone has been accompanied by rumors of the early arrival here of the representative of the company from London for the purpose of closing a deal. Frequently this agent has been reported on board ship and due in New York in a day or so. The result has been that each time recently when the stock has suddenly awakened from its lethargy one of the more witty of the street's commentators has been moved to remark, "Well, the man is on the boat again."

Coppers and utilities have swung into the pace of the market's advance after having shown a tendency to lag. Nothing in the way of news developed to influence the buying which is evidently based chiefly on the fact that they have not kept pace with the general list. Coppers pushed ahead in face of the report that the metal was actually moving for domestic delivery at the 11-cent level. It is reported that the metal is being contracted for by a producer and not by customs smelters as heretofore.

Though a slightly better tone has been in evidence in some parts of the money market, notably in time money and in commercial paper, ease to a degree very seldom witnessed, is still the rule in the case of demand funds. Yesterday it was reported virtually impossible to place funds on a lay basis at the official 2 per cent rate. That condition was no great surprise with money being placed freely in the outside market before midday as low as 1¼ per cent.

A partner of one of the Street's largest wire houses discussing the market outlook says he is inclined to the view that the present market might better be characterized as a "bullish" rather than out and out bull market. Explaining, he expresses the opinion that we are not embarking on any three, four or five-year period of bull markets, but rather are likely to duplicate the action of the market from August, 1921, to April of 1923, following the post-war collapse of 1920-21. He points out that the market during that period was guided chiefly by technical conditions pending the approach of definite and sustained upturn in basic conditions which did not actually set in until early in 1924. Still the market was able to move ahead some 40 average points and hold for the most part in the higher brackets of the range, with a dip in the summer of 1924 preceding the entry into the long bull period which culminated last summer.

Strength in International Salt is generally looked upon as reflecting the approach of the time for the expiration of subscription "rights" now outstanding. These privileges, giving the holder the right to purchase one additional share of stock for each three shares held at $36 a share, are due to expire with the close of business on Monday. The holder therefore must decide either to exercise his "right" or dispose of it before that time. Expectations that the impending second quarter report will show up very well also furnished partial explanation for the strength.

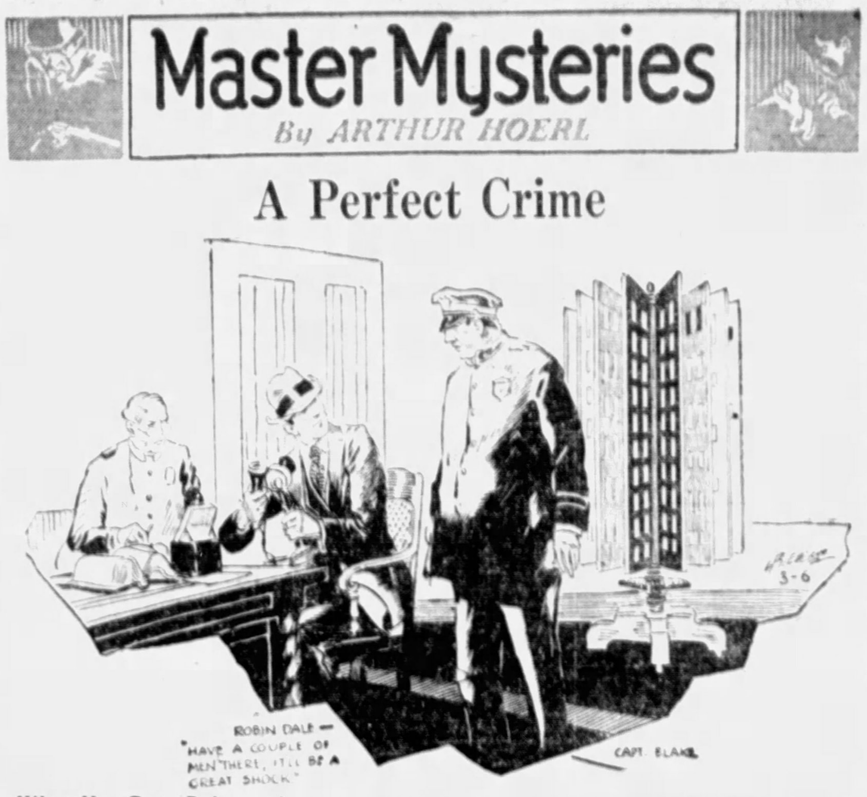
AMERICAN ZINC NET STEADY

BOSTON, July 19.—It is estimated that second quarter's earnings of the American Zinc, Lead and Smelting Company, before depreciation and depletion, were slightly in excess of $200,000. There was, therefore, but slight recession from the earnings, on a similar basis, of $226,332 in the first quarter.

In the first half of the current year American Zinc, therefore, earned approximately $426,332 before depreciation and depletion, compared with $616,364 in corresponding period of 1929. It is estimated that after the above charges, earnings were just about sufficient to cover dividend requirements of $3 per share on the 60,329 shares of $6 preferred.

Decline in Volume Of Reserve Credit

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended July 16, as reported by Federal Reserve banks was $1,014,000,000, a decrease of $61,000,000 compared with the corresponding week of 1929. Holdings of discounted bills decreased $29,000,000 during the week.



Master Mysteries

By ARTHUR HOERL

A Perfect Crime

What Has Gone Before.

A particularly atrocious murder is discovered in a private room in a speakeasy. There is not a single clue to the identity of either the victim or the criminal, except the victim's cap marked S. S. Delia. The S. S. Delia had foundered some days before in mid-Atlantic with every soul on board. Robin Dale's story of the crime, in the Daily Journal, brings forward a Mrs. Robertson, who identifies the victim as Harry Gibbs, her brother. She admits he was a steward on the Delia and implicated with a diamond-smuggling gang headed by a mysterious Wallace. Mrs. Robertson's husband has come to New York from London in the interests of a large inheritance. He receives a note warning him that first his wife and then he will die unless he splits the estate. The note is signed "W." Dale cannot fasten his own suspicions on any of the four suspects: Robertson, Mrs. Robertson, the vague Wallace, or Druid, who was left in charge of Robertson's London affairs and has betrayed the trust. Then Dale learns that Mrs. Robertson has been brutally murdered. Capt. Blake investigates and finds that the woman was killed about 10 in the morning. He learns that the husband was at his attorney's office at that hour, and the detective on duty at Robertson's home had been lured away by a bogus telephone call.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI

Dale got his story in and dropped in on Captain Blake shortly after noon.

"With all the excitement, we've overlooked the fact that Inspector Graham gets in today on the Coronia. We'll have a second shock for him."

"Two of that kind are plenty, but I think we're due for at least one more."

"One more?"

"The solution of the things ought to be something of a shock."

"It looks very much like Robertson to me, but for the life of me I can't understand why. There's no one else left to pin it on. What do you think, Dale?"

He seems to have accounted for his time all right. Lawyer's office — steamship office for tickets . . . have you tried to fix a motive for him?"

"Same motive any man might have for getting rid of his wife."

"There's usually another woman. In this case there hasn't been a sign of one. If he wanted to do away with her, why would he pick on her brother first? No, I'm afraid it all goes deeper than that. It's too commonplace that way."

"Well, we'll have to pinch somebody. The papers are making monkeys out of us now."

"Except the Daily Journal."

The door opened, and Skelly came in, accompanied by Phillip Robertson. At a glance they could see the man was terribly agitated. He went directly to Capt. Blake's desk.

"This, sir, came in the mail a short time ago!"

Blake read it, and his eyes narrowed. He laid it on the desk so that Dale could read. It was again the "W" with the printed letters.

"You were warned. Inspector Graham, who arrives today, is not really Inspector Graham. Do as he says, and do not show this to the police as you did before. "W."

The envelope was postmarked this time at the Grand Central office.

"With your permission, sir, I shall remain with one of your officers until after I've arranged my affairs at the bank this afternoon. After that I'll plan some way to go into hiding. Is there no way to place this demon under arrest?"

"We're fully as anxious as you are, Mr. Robertson. Nothing will be left undone . . . meanwhile Skelly will remain with you."

He left the note with Capt. Blake and went out with Skelly.

"At every turn it becomes more bewildering. Now I don't know how to greet Graham. It's just as you've said, Dale, the thing's been worked out perfectly. But, as perfect as they try to be there's always one slip somewhere."

"If it can be found."

An attendant looked in through the door.

"Mr. Dale here? Oh, yes . . . call for you, Dale."

"Take it here."

Dale picked up the receiver. "Hello . . . oh, that you Reilly . . . go ahead and speak, you're among friends . . ." Dale listened for quite a time in silence . . . I think that'll be about all, Reilly. Darn good work. Tell Pop to hold the big spot for a story tonight. Yeah, the solution of the Gibbs case. So long."

Robin Dale settled back in the chair and lit a cigaret. He always had a flare for the theatrical. He got a kick out of keeping Capt. Blake in suspense. The captain knew what he was up to and calmly reached for a cigar, lit it and puffed away in silence.

"Four o'clock, captain."

"Got everything you wanted?"

"Everything."

"I hope you're right."

"Good."

"It'll come to a head when Mr. Robertson is at the bank."

"We'll go there."

"Have a couple of men there. It'll be a great shock."

"Damn you, Dale, I'd like to have you on the force."

"Damn yourself, I am, in a way."

They both grinned and Dale strolled toward the door.

"Four o'clock."

"It's a date."

"So long."

"So long."

Captain Blake puffed with a great deal of satisfaction.

(Why did Robin Dale set four o'clock as the time for the arrest? Who was responsible for the murders of Harry Gibbs and Florrie Robertson? What was the motive behind the crimes? Why did Robin Dale while at breakfast realize that there would be a second crime? (Read the answers in next Saturday's Sun-Telegraph.

SOLUTION TO

His Last Performance

By ARTHUR HOERL.

"It will be necessary for me to take this copy of the play Paramour which was found this morning in the apartment of a poor girl who was strangled to death." Robin Dale was addressing a rapt audience from the stage of the Christine Theater. In the audience were, beside Capt. Blake, Wilfred Sands and Jardin, all those who had figured in the case . . . Parmela Gregory, Murray Clyde, Michael the doorman, Etheline Wynn and Ralph Byrnes. At the exits uniformed policemen were stationed. The stage was still dressed for the last act of Paramour as it was the night of Alvin Merle's death.

"The business described in this manuscript," and Dale was referring to it as he stood behind the footlights, "is almost exactly as Alvin Merle played it during his last performance. After he had finished the terrible punishment deserved by his faithless wife, Merle in a fit of abandon drinks from the bottle on the table . . ." Dale turned to take the bottle to suit the action to the word. But there was no bottle. "The bottle is no longer here. I rather expected that, because in that bottle during the performance was a deadly poison which killed Alvin Merle! He met his death, really, before the very eyes of a packed theater. But it was a slow poison—Dr. Wattles of the police department has confirmed that. Alvin Merle went to his dressing room. It took over 10 minutes for the poison to have its fatal effect. Later the murderer returned, having established an alibi. He knocked at the dressing room door knowing Alvin Merle to be dead. He went into the room and quickly wound the sash from a dressing robe about the neck of a man already poisoned, because he believed it would never be known that poison, and not strangulation was the cause of death. The poison he used was cadien which effects only the lungs causing them to stop functioning."

"It's a lie!" Murray Clyde was on his feet hurling frenzied oaths at Dale. Jardin sprang across the aisle and suddenly Clyde leapt into the orchestra pit. There was an exit from that—his one chance. But they had thought of that. An officer barred his way and in a moment Jardin had his prisoner shackled!

"That much I was sure of, my dear audience . . . the rest was surmise. Clyde was in love with Belle Sargent, but she was madly infatuated with Alvin Merle. Clyde leapt into the orchestra keep them apart. In a jealous rage, perhaps, he told the girl what he would do to Merle if she persisted. She came to the theater to warn him on the fatal night, but unfortunately was not able to see him."

That evening Robin Dale added something to his library. It was Parmela Gregory's script of Paramour.

'The Muffled Shot'

By ARTHUR HOERL.

The fourth of a series of enthralling "Master Mystery" stories, will be published in the Sun-Telegraph starting next Monday.

SILVER OUTPUT UP IN JUNE

NEW YORK, July 19.—Production of silver during June showed a slight decrease, according to report of American Bureau of Metal Statistics. While United States production during June increased slightly, amounting to 4,299,000 ounces, compared with 4,293,000 ounces in May and 4,976,000 in June, a year ago, Canada and Peru reported substantial reductions. Canadian June output amounted to 1,485,000 ounces, compared with 1,585,000 in May and 1,146,000 in June, 1929, while figures for Peru were 1,571,000, against 1,959,000 and 1,973,000.

Latest figures available for Mexico show that steps taken by Mexican government to curtail production, plus the prevailing low prices for the metal, are having a decided effect upon production in that country. Mexican output for April declined to 7,514,000 ounces from 8,844,000 ounces in March, and 12,717,000 in February. Bullion brokers believe that the May figures will reveal a further cut.

CUT CHEMICAL PRICES

NEW YORK, July 19.—Lower price levels and restricted production schedules marked developments in heavy chemical markets during the last month, Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering reports. Trading throughout the period was spotty, with seasonal dullness exerting a depressive influence on demand for many selections.

Changes in sales schedules for chemicals during the month were all in favor of buyers. Acetate of lime, acetic acid, tartaric acid, chlorine, tri-sodium-phosphate, sulphate of ammonia, tin salts, lead pigments and naval stores were among commodities for which reduced sales prices became effective. In some cases, where the open quotation was unchanged, buyers were able to obtain concessions.

Consumption of chemicals in general has been large, although the first half of this year is admitted to be lower than in the same period last year.

Nitrogen Industry In Firm Condition

NEW YORK, July 19.—The nitrogen and fertilizer industries in the United States are now on such a firm foundation through the successful manufacture of nitrogenous products by artificial processes that the reported consolidation of the Chilean government nitrate interest, with private operation including the Guggenheim interests of New York, will not materially affect them, according to the specialist in nitrogen at the geogolical survey, Department of the Interior, G. R. Mansfield.

Increased Earnings By Holland Furnace

DETROIT, July 19. — Officials of Holland Furnace Company expect that final fiesures on operations for six months ended June 30 will show higher earnings than for the corresponding period of 1929, a record year. June sales this year were 10 per cent greater than in June last year. However, six months' sales to June 30 this year are expected to be slightly less than a year ago. For the first half of 1929, Holland reported net profit of $540,641, equal, after preferred dividends, to $1.14 a share on present capitalization.

Vancouver Lumber Shipments Decline

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Declared exports of manufactured lumber from Vancouver to this country in June totaled 34,404,000 board feet, a decrease of approximately 9,000,000 feet from the same month last year. Exports during the first half of 1930 amounted to 226,065,000 board feet, an increase of 3 per cent over the amount brought in during the first half of last year.

Forbes

Montreal, Real City, Has Million Counting Suburbs.

By B. C. FORBES

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 18. —(Westward bound.)—I have just paid a brief visit to Montreal, one of the half-dozen or so million-population cities in North America. It doesn't look it. One suspects that Canada's metropolis has taken a leaf out of an American city's book. The million, it is explained when you ask questions, isn't all Montreal's; the million represent Montreal and suburbs. Figuring that way, New York could doubtless roll up ten million or more.

Montreal, however, is a real city, make no mistake. Fifteen years ago it impressed me as a town. Now it has grown into city stature. Its most impressive possession, businesswise, is its wonderful harbor. You learn that "Montreal harbor is the second largest port on the American continent, and possesses the largest grain exporting vator system in the world. Its nine miles of deep draft wharves are capable of accommodating one hundred large ocean steamers."

HERE IS AN extraordinary fact claimed by Montreal:

"It is approximately one thousand miles from the sea, the farthest inland port in the world, yet is nearer Europe than any other large Atlantic seaport."

Again:

"The port has handling and storage capacity in excess of any other North American ocean port. Its volume of foreign trade is exceeded only by New York's.

"It is the port of shipment of one-third of Canada's entire national trade. For years it has been the world's greatest grain shipping seaport."

IF LOS ANGELES or New Orleans or San Francisco or Boston or New York or other United States seaports challenge these statements, Montreal will have to do its own replying. I have checked up none of them. At that, Montreal is a great seaport and has developed here facilities with energy and intelligence.

I rather think some of our New York politicians could learn something from Montreal on how to handle ships, piers, etc., and learn how to do it without greasing of palms. The city looks prosperous. Many very fine residences are being built. I understand, however, that the one or two of the most palatial old-time estates would be sold were half-way decent bids received. They are grandiose affairs, fit for high-titled and for multi-millionaire families. Hard times have hit their owners.

AS FOR ECONOMIC conditions in Canada, more will be said in later columns. The Dominion is in the throes of a parliamentary election and what the opposition is saying about the badness of conditions is plenty—plenty plus. They could not well be as terrible as alleged; but, of course, they admitted they are not prosperous any more than our own.

You hear on all sides that this election in Canada is greatly benefitted by the thirstiness of Americans. I saw one batch of tipsy sightseers who had all earmarks of hailing from across the Dominion's southern border.

Since boone—or, rather the official prohibition of boone—has become such a widespread subject of discussion, and since there is so much agitation for altering existing conditions, this summary of Quebec's liquor laws may be of interest:

A COMMISSION administrates the laws. It has established liquor stores in cities for the sale of one bottle at a time, in sealed packages (but you can go out and return for another bottle, and repeat the performance.) Hours are: Nine to six; Saturdays, nine to five. Closed on Sundays. Wines and beers (only) are sold in hotels, restaurants, steamboats, dining cars and clubs at meals between 9 a. m. and 10 p. m.

The few persons I talked with expressed the view that the liquor question was not at all a burning one. Apparently it is far from being a subject of daily and hourly discussion.

Would that the same could be said of the United States. Europeans think we are nutty on the subject. And perhaps they are right.

Fruit Crops Exceed 1929 Production

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Production of fruit this year, as indicated by the condition of the crops July 1, will be about 15 per cent larger than last year but 10 per cent below the 10-year average, the Department of Agriculture predicts.

Improvement over last year is credited by the department largely to better prospects in the North Atlantic and western states for all the generally grown fruit crops except peaches.

Surplus Freight Cars Show Decline

Class 1 railroads on June 30 had 465,464 freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the car service division of the American Railway Association reports.

This was a decrease of 434 cars compared with June 23, at which time there were 465,898 cars.

Surplus coal cars on June 30 totaled 163,396 cars, an increase of 9,302 cars within approximately a week, while surplus box cars totaled 246,622 cars, a decrease of 8,493 cars for the same period.

Lily Threatens to Expose Raquel's Father

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Raquel Rojos, a fiery beauty in revolt against her drab home in Hermosa, on the Mexican border, learns from her mother that Bill Johnson, the richest man in town, is building a house in which to install as his bride a lady known as Lily. Raquel, confident of her charms, flirts with Bill and wins a proposal of marriage. She does not love him, but she wants to free herself from the dominance of her dissolute father, Pancho. Then she decides she can't go through with it and flees on a train headed for Phoenix, Ariz. Her thoughts turn back to the ease with which she captured Bill Johnson's heart. She recalls the weeping face of Anne Schlemmer, who really loved him, and the bitter enmity of Lily, a cabaret singer, who thought Bill was going to marry her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IV.

Raquel stirred uneasily.

Glump—glump—rackety—rack—glump, glump. There was a flat wheel on this car of the train. Until now she had not been aware of its disturbing clatter.

Lily! Back her mind raced to events at Hermosa. A tingling sensation ran along Raquel's nerve wires. Lily and that flat wheel. Mentally, she shook herself free of them. Lily had gone out of her life.

Poor bedizened Lily with the straw hair and the hard mouth. Where was Lily now, she wondered? The question muffled the clatter of the flat wheel. It carried Raquel again to that night she had left Anna Schlemmer blubbering outside her mother's boarding-house.

Raquel had been walking along in the darkness, thinking about Lily. Lily would not give Johnson up without a struggle. Not a clean struggle either. A woman with a mouth like Lily's would stop at nothing. Everything to gain, nothing to lose—

A ray of light slanted across Raquel's path. She was passing the Eldorado, where Keno Joe ran a cabaret as a lure for his gambling game. Lily was the cabaret. Raquel could hear now, her high nasal soprano whining out the last bars of one of those love ballads that whipped up the sentiment of maudlin customers, causing them to rap vigorously for another round of tequila.

"Then I put my arms about you
And now I can't do without you."

Face to Face

Raquel and Lily Speak Of Johnson

The last word was drowned in a heavy thump of fists on tables. Lily appeared in the door. The full curves of her figure were outlined sharply against the bright, smoke-filled room.

For a moment only she hesitated there. Then, seeing Raquel in the slanting ray of light, she advanced, with leonine sway, toward the girl, slender and alert.

"I been looking for you, Miss Rojos," Lily said. The night air was drenched with the odor of cheap perfume from her hot body.

"What for?" Raquel faced her quarrely. No use mincing matters. They had to have it out between them, she and Lily, about Johnson.

"I hear you been lolling around after Bill Johnson. You let Johnson alone. I'm warning you." Lily's voice was low. There was menace in it.

Raquel's shoulders lifted. Her white teeth gleamed through a half smile.

"Why don't you tell this to Johnson?" she asked.

The taunt went home. She could see Lily tremble with rage, the spangles of her tawdry dance dress throwing off green points of light.

Lily's Trump

Threatens to Expose Raquel's Father

"Never you mind Johnson. I'll take care of him," snapped Lily. "Just you lay off. This moonlight stuff is liable to be bad for your health, my pretty dove."

"So?" Raquel's face, tense and white, was close against the ear of the astonished Lily. "Then you listen to this, fat hen. Johnson has asked me to marry him and I'm saying yes. Go cackle that to your friends in Joe's place, will you?"

She heard the sharp intake of Lily's breath. A strangled scream. Lily's hand in her hair.

"Stand still and hear me now." The words dropped like hot coals from the woman's dry lips. "What you think I been mooching around with that greasy thief, Pancho Rojos, and his gang of dog robbers for? To get next to their schemes, that's why. I've done it, too."

Raquel drew back. "You mean you'd tell—"

"Sure I will. Double-cross the whole filthy lot of 'em. I got enough on Pancho to send him to the pen nine times. If he could live that many years. I plan to turn him over, too, if you don't lay off Johnson. I'll spill the whole dirty plate o' beans."

"You wouldn't dare!"

"Wouldn't I, eh?" Lily laughed hysterically. "You and your old man! A jail bird. And if you think Johnson'll stand for a striped suit in the family, you don't know Johnson. He'll drop you like you was a rattlesnake. Now, pretty dove, does that make you lose your taste for other women's property?"

How much did Lily know? Could she really pull the wires that would end Pancho's scheming career? Her father had once been a gentleman, a man of family, of education. Before the pulque parlors, the brain-searing tequila sucked him down. Pancho looking out from behind the bars—

Father Marked

Accused of Implication In Holdup

"You lie." Raquel's voice was level, crisp with scorn. "All you know about Pancho won't hurt him any."

"Oh, no, it won't hurt him—much." Lily's control was crackling apart. "Not when they find out about the Turner mine job in Sonora, and whose gang it was got the payroll in—"

Raquel's hand shot out, caught Lily's spangled dress just where it met her pink flesh above the curve of her breasts. There was a ripping, a tearing. Spangles spattered down like angry rain-drops. Lily, taken by surprise, loosened her grip in Raquel's hair. The hair fell, a sable scarf, about Raquel's head and shoulders.

"That will teach you to keep your hands off me, fat hen." Raquel brushed the sable cloud from her eyes with a steady hand.

"I'll show you, Johnson's mine, I tell you. I'll turn Pancho—"

Raquel's Scheme

Finds Way to Silence Her Rival

"Stop your clucking, will you? You can have Johnson. And welcome, for all of me."

Lily sniffed, fussed with the front of her damaged dress.

"I thought you'd change your mind," she said, "when you found out what I've got on Pancho."

"I haven't changed my mind," Raquel's airy denial mocked the woman in the spangled masquerade of pleasure. "I just thought I'd scare you so you'd chain Johnson to your wrist. I don't want him around pestering me. Better watch him, though, Lily. He's good game for anyone that wears skirts, now that he's through with you."

"Imp of the devil!" Lily cried and lunged again for the sable cloud of hair. Her hands closed on nothingness. Raquel had disappeared into the darkness.

For a while Raquel sat on a crumbling adobe wall farther down the dust-cushioned street. That patch of luminous yellow in the distance was the open door of the Eldorado. Lily was singing again. Falsetto notes that rasped like a rusty saw caught in the grain of a touch-fibered log.

Was Pancho all that Lily had hinted? She had known dimly that he stood in danger from the law, but she did not know how seriously. Had he really gone as far as that? Well, Raquel had heard something once, a vague something about Lucy, her mother. That Pancho had carried Lucy off from a little isolated schoolhouse where she was teaching. Across his saddle. This, at least, lent the color to recklessness to his actions. Raquel had never troubled to search out the truth of the rumor. What did it matter, now that Lucy was Lucy?

So Lily believed she could frighten her, Raquel, away from Johnson! Pat squawking hen!

Raquel sat there on the wall until the thud of fists on tables came dully to her ears. Then she rose, abruptly, and padded swiftly down a narrow lane in the direction of the Rojos shack.

It had come to Raquel, like a star shot out of the sky, that there was a way to silence Lily. The woman herself had shown that way.

A light guttered through a slit of a window in the shack. A candle from a battered and blackened silver candlestick out of Lucy's past. Pancho was home.

"Father," Raquel cried, bursting in at the door, cleaving like a wind-driven cloud the sullen pall Pancho never failed to throw over the shack. "Father, you must go away at once. They're coming for you. The police. Oh—father!"

by HARRY KECK, SPORTS EDITOR

Good Old Days, Of the Past. Matched by Present.

Matter of Perspective. We Have Bobby Jones. And Gallant Fox.

OUR GUS SUHR IS HONEST

BARNEY OLDFIELD — MAURICE M'LOUGHLIN

Two of the heroes of the alleged "good old days." Were they better than the stars of today? Of course, you are entitled to your opinion, but this column thinks the leaders of today are at least as good, if not better. Read on below.

One of the pet vices of the oldtimers is to scoff at modern times.

This applies to all walks of life, but the subject probably is most interesting when confined to the sports realm.

They tell us that we don't have any Delehantys, Brouthers, Ansons, Langes, Keelers, Wagners, Lajoies, Cobbs or Waddells in baseball any more.

In boxing, they rave and rant about the Sullivans, Corbetts, Fitzsimmonses, Nelsons, Ganses and others.

Tennis veterans will regale you by the hour about the Dohertys, Brookeses, Wildings and McLoughlins.

In golf, we hear about the Travises, Taylors, Herds and Travereses.

Horsemen sing the praises of the great thoroughbreds of the "good old, olden days."

The automobile men like to talk about the times of the Bob Burmans, Barney Oldfields and Ralph De Palmas, when a mile a minute was SPEED.

Bah! And balderdash!

We can match any and all of the oldtimers in any branch of sport and even go them one or two better. The world moves and improves. The only difference is that memories of the dim past have more appeal than the doings of today. Familiarity breeds contempt, and when we rub elbows with the satellites we are not prone to appreciate them. Years from now we will know and value the worth of the present generation, and then it will be too late.

NO BETTER EXAMPLE could be cited in Pittsburgh than the case of Harry Greb. Here was one of the real fighting men of all time, a great competitor, who was taken for granted in his home town when he was fighting at his best and has been really appreciated only since he has departed from this sphere. When he was alive and fighting, Greb rarely sold out the local arenas. Now the remark is oft repeated by the patrons of the socking art that they would give almost anything just to see the whirlwind man do his stuff again for a night.

Time and distance lend enchantment.

What did they have in the old days in sports that we do not have now?

Dempsey and Tunney were real heavyweight champions and Jack Sharkey would have been a top ranking contender in any era.

Show us the baseball player of any period who could cast Babe Ruth in the shadow.

BILL TILDEN STANDS at the top of all tennis players across his years of achievement, and Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, at 26, has won many more major championships than even Bobby Jones, whose equal in golfdom never has been known.

Was there ever a more consistent 3-year-old on the racing turf than Gallant Fox, the sensation of this season?

And were there any greater automobile racing daredevils in the past than we have now, even granting that the machines were not perfected then as they are now?

Yes, sir, the grass in our neighbors' yards always is greener than in our own. But it is merely an optical illusion. And the point is carried on through a comparison of eras in sportdom. Years from now when all of us are old and gray—or bald, as the case may be—we probably shall be telling the new generation about our Bobby Joneses and Helen Willses and Gallant Foxes and the other heroes of today, whom we can't appreciate to the full measure of their greatness because we are too close to them to gain the proper perspective.

Sport Vignettes

T. F. BOOSER, of Homestead, wants to nominate Gus Suhr, of the Pirates, as one of the Honest Men of the world. Booser lost his wallet on a trip between Altoona and Homestead Park in April and it was returned to him by Gus on July 7 . . . "Honest Gus—Lucky Me," is his observation in reporting the incident . . . The United States team of track and field stars that will compete against a picked team of British aces in Chicago will be selected at the National A. A. U. championships to be held at the Stadium here on August 22, 23 and 25 . . . Nearly 400 will vie for honors here and 60 of these will face the pick of the British Empire in the competition to follow . . . The British team will include the stars of England, Canada, New Zealand, Australia, South Africa, Scotland, Wales, Newfoundland, British Guiana and Bermuda, and heading its roster will be such notables as Percy Williams, the Canadian sprinter, of Olympic Games fame; Lord Burghley, England's great hurdler, and Stan Lay, premier javelin thrower of New Zealand.

HARRY STUHLDREHER, quarterback of the famous Four Horsemen eleven at Notre Dame some years back, faces a tough assignment as coach of the Villanova College squad next fall as a result of having projected the Wildcats into the national limelight.

With many of his stars of last year graduated, Stuhldreher will have to prepare his charges for games with Boston College, Temple University, Duke University, Ogelthorpe, Bucknell, Georgetown and Washington State College . . . Clyde Crabtree, all-America quarterback at the University of Florida, will play professionally with the Frankford Yellow Jackets in the National League next fall.

LOCALS TAKE CONTEST IN TWELFTH

Night baseball in Pittsburgh bounced off to an artistic start last night when the Homestead Grays gained a 5-to-4 victory over the Kansas City Monarchs, Negro National League champions, in 12 innings.

While the crowd did not come to expectations — there being slightly less than 6,000 in the stands, the brand of baseball offered is certain to draw more customers out when the teams renew their series tonight. They also play at Forbes Field this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The game was comparatively clean considering the fact that it was the first of its kind in Pittsburgh and also that the Grays have had the experience of only four night games, while their rivals have been playing nocturnal baseball for over a month.

ERRORS FEW

The huge flood lights stationed about the field did not seem to bother the combatants in the least and the errors which were committed were the kind that come in any kind of a baseball game.

The game was a little late in getting started, the promoters waiting until nearly 9 o'clock to launch the venture and once it was under way all sorts of exciting baseball was offered. Sensational plays came in rapid order, especially in the closing innings, when the Monarchs nipped two Grays' rallies. This happened in the ninth after the Grays had deadlocked the count at 4 all and again in the eleventh when they threatened to end hostilities.

The field was practically as bright as during the daytime, the flood lights penetrating every inch of playing space and sections of the stands. Two projectors were stationed off the first base coachers' box, another directly opposite third, one midway between third and left field, another in left center and one in right center. Eight additional balcony reflectors, two of which overlooked right field and six up over first base enabled the spectators to follow every movement of the players without any trouble.

THRILLING CLIMAX

Owing to the fact that last night's game went into extra innings and had a thrilling climax it is believed the attendance for Saturday's night's game will exceed that which turned out to witness the inaugural.

Officials of the Pittsburgh baseball club sat through the game and were as interested as the ordinary fans. Many of those who came to satisfy their curiosity as to the merits of nocturnal baseball left the park of the impression that it is the game of the future. All sorts of laudatory remarks were expressed during and after the contest. Doubtless those who are inclined to be critical may find some fault with the projectors stationed off first and third base as they gave interference to the fielding of pop fouls. Outside of this everything else went off perfectly.

SHARON NEXT

Pittsburgh is the fifth city in which major league clubs operate where night baseball has been presented by the Monarchs. The others are Detroit, St. Louis, Chicago and Cleveland, where the Monarchs performed prior to their local invasion.

After tonight's game the teams will go to Sharon for a doubleheader on Sunday afternoon. The lighting equipment will be taken down on Sunday and made ready to transport to Altoona, Pa., where the Grays and Monarchs are scheduled to play Monday night. They are billed in Beaver

THE LOWDOWN ON THE BUCS

By THE BENCHWARMER.

BOSTON, July 19.—Well, folks, we are lookin' better again, especially at the plate. We all felt bad when Lloyd had to leave in the third inning, but they say it was more the heat than anything else. It's been awful hot in the past couple of days, and Lloyd hadn't been able to eat. Glenn Spencer pitched a right smart game all the way. I noticed before we went out on the field Ervin Brame and Steve Swetonic had Glenn over in a corner for about 10 minutes, telling him just how to work on the Boston hitters. Glenn is a great boy who will listen, and the Pirates have got a lot of players that want to help the kids.

Jule is feeling better now since the club has begun to win. Hal Finney came in with the same smile he had all the time in Paso Robles. He is the Alabama boy who works so hard on his dad's farm in the winter he wears out about a dozen mules.

All the boys had the glad hand for Finney, and a few of them was askin' a lot about Columbia. You see, Columbia is the Pirate farm, and it finished in the cubway in first half. I guess the club has had a flock of managers already, and some of our extra men seemed to be afraid they might have to go down and run the team before the second half is over. It's one of them horse-and-buggy leagues where you're lucky if you get three meals a day.

Hal reported with a bunch of new sticks. Rolly Hemsley tried one out and gave it the bird after he missed a third strike, so Finney's bats will be safe from now on.

HELEN JACOBS BACK.

Harris Stops Darrah, Hurts Hand Doing It

WHEELING, W. Va., July 19.—Harry Harris, of Bellaire, light heavyweight, knocked out Jimmy Darrah, of Akron, in the third round of a scheduled 10-round fight here last night and slightly injured his right hand doing the trick. Harris, who has won his last two fights by knockouts, put Darrah down for a count of seven in the first, and for a count of nine in the second before knocking him out in the third. A right cross put Darrah down in the third. The show was a benefit for the family of Young Bruno, of Moundsville, killed in a local ring several weeks ago.

BOSTON, July 19.—With three straight victories to their credit, the Pirates today were hopeful that the afternoon would make it four out of five from the Braves, who, up to the present series, have been the oil in the ointment for the Freebooters. The series is slated to come to a close today.

Manager Ens has Ervin Brame ready for the Tribe while Bill McKechnie expects to send Bob Smith out to heckle the Pirates. Not so long ago the same Bob of the Atlanta Smiths blanked the Buccos at Forbes Field. The Pirates, however, are in a distinctive batting mood at present, and they feel they can take the measure of Bob.

BUCS WIN, 12-4

With Adam Comorosky setting a furious pace, the Ensmen handed the Braves a 12-to-4 setback yesterday, the victory enabling the Pittsburghers to leap-frog the Tribe into fifth place. The Polish flyer, whose batting has been a big feature of the trip, combed Skipper Bill's pitchers for a ripping homer into the left-field bleachers, two doubles and a single.

Comorosky is having his banner year of baseball. The deservedly popular coal miner is leading the Pirates in driving in runs. With more than 70 to his credit at this early date, he has a chance to lead the league in two-sackers, his brace of doubles yesterday sending his string to 34 for the season. But these figures do not begin to give the true value of the bow-legged sprinter, who is really the best base-runner on a club that features several nimble lads of the paths.

Commy has yet to make a blunder on the bases, and his defense play is brilliant. Outside of the Oakland orchard, where the sun bothers him a bit, Commy is regarded as one of the best, if not the premier left fielder of the league.

BOOTS GETS HOMER

Boots Grantham also cashed in with a homer while the Freebooters were slamming out 16 safe

Nick Altrock Says:

CLEVELAND, July 19.—That crucial series in Brooklyn this week is to determine whether the Flatbush fans are as handy as the Chicago customers with pop bottles and other non-refillable weapons. You take your average Robin rooter and he would look just right wearing a form-fitting padded cell, with a straight jacket for his underclothes. If I was those Cub players, I would rather be running opposition beer in Al Capone's territory back home than running bases in the Brooklyn ball park.

Nick Altrock

On the other hand, when they play in Chicago, the Robins are always liable to be mistaken for clay pigeons, so that makes everything even. May the better team survive.

ALLISON VICTOR IN FIRST DAVIS CUP TILT

LOTT LEADS DE MORPURGO AT AUTEUIL

BULLETIN.

AUTEUIL, France, July 19.—George Lott, of Chicago, defeated Baron Humbert De Morpurgo, of Italy, 3-6, 9-7, 10-8, 6-3, here today in a match continued from yesterday, and gave the United States its second victory in two matches of the interzone Davis Cup tennis final.

AUTEUIL, France, July 19 (AP.)—One victory already won America's tennis youngsters went out after the two more they needed to eliminate Italy in the Davis Cup interzone finals today and gain the challenge round against France.

Wilmer Allison gave the United States its first point in the opening singles match yesterday conquering Giorgio De Stefani the ambidextrous Italian after a grueling struggle 4-6 7-9 6-4 8-6 10-8. Puzzled by De Stefani's unorthodox style the Texan needed two sets to find out what it was all about and then managed to take the next three to win the match.

The second singles match was postponed until today with George Lott leading Baron Humbert L. De Morpurgo No. 1 man of the Italian team. De Morpurgo took the first set 6-3 but Lott playing his best game won the next two 9-7, 10-8. This match was completed at 2 p. m. today and in the event that Lott won out, the United States could win the series by nightfall. The doubles with Allison and John Van Ryn matched against Placido Gaslini and Alberto Del Bono were to follow immediately after the Lott-Morpurgo match.

Tomorrow's schedule was to see Morpurgo opposed to Allison and Lott against De Stefani in the final pair of singles matches.

BRAME PRIMED FOR TRIBE

drives at the Wigwam. It was Boots' long wallop into the right field stands in the first round that gave the Pirates an impetus on which to ride to their triumph. George thus recorded his thirteenth homer of a big season.

Glenn Spencer pitched the entire game for the Buccos, the Binghamton lad holding the home offensive to nine hits. Glenn had his fast ball jumping and he mixed his hook judiciously.

Manager McKechnie had his ace on the mound, but Harry Seibold found the Pittsburghers in a batting humor. Seibold was followed to the slab by Fred Frankhouse and Bruce Cunningham.

Lloyd Waner had to leave the game with sickness after taking part in two innings. It might have been the unusual heat, but, anyhow, the ailing outfielder was unable to eat properly. After he had turned in a fine catch of Seibold's long fly in the second round he was unable to continue, so Fred Brickell did his customary relief work. It wasn't known definitely this morning whether the little fellow would be able to play today.

HAL JOINS TEAM

Catcher Hal Finney, who has been doing the receiving trick on the Columbia farm, joined his mates just before yesterday's contest started. Hal is to get some action tomorrow when the Pirates play an exhibition game at Binghamton, the home of Glenn Spencer.

Spencer's friends are expected out in large numbers when the Buccos take on the New York-Pennsylvania leaguers. Glenn may twirl a few innings in honor of the occasion.

Lloyd Waner reached first at the start of yesterday's game when Sisler fumbled his grounder. P. Waner fouled out, but Graham hit a remarkable homer into the right field bleachers, scoring L. Waner in advance. Comorosky cracked a double against the left field bleachers and he moved ahead on Traynor's sacrifice fly, Suhr's single scored Comm.

The Buccos had runners on third and first with none out in the second, but Seibold kept them from scoring. The home half saw two runs scored. Welsh opened with a double and advanced on a wild pitch. Chatham walked, Spencer fanned Spohrer, but Maguire came through with a single that scored one run and moved Chatham to third. The latter tallied as Maguire went out in a steal attempt.

HITTING TIMELY

The Braves reached a deadlock with the Pirates in the fifth when Welsh worked his way around on a walk, a single by Chatham and a wide throw by Hemsley who tried to catch Welsh off third. The shot hit the runner and Jimmy tallied.

Timely hitting by Comorosky and Traynor aided by loose defense play by the foe, helped the Buccos to three tallies in the fifth. The third run came over as Seibold made a balk.

Fred Frankhouse was on the mound in the sixth while the Pirates were putting the game on the ice through the medium of five tallies. All five of the runs were made after two were out. The round produced five safeties. Cunningham relieving Frankhouse to retire the Pirates.

MEASURING ONE SECOND BY THE COUNT OF SIX.

E. K. Hall, chairman of the Football Rules Committee, for whom I have the highest respect, has come out with an explanation saying that it was just a suggestion "that one second be measured by counting six if the official did not have a stop watch." Personally, I do not think this is at all fair. The rules committee in defining a second as being the count of six could just as well say that 36 inches are two yards. The rules committee has no more right to define a second by the count of six than to say that 36 inches are three of some official's feet, because there is some difference between the feet of Marilyn Miller, the Follies' star, and those put out by Carnera. In fact, when measuring off a 15 yard penalty against our team he generally walks off 18 yards and when he is measuring it off against an opponent he walks off 13 yards.

Knute Rockne

A second of time can be measured only by an accurate watch and an accurate timer. No two men count six alike. The suggestion that the interval of time known as one second be measured by the count of six should, in all fairness, be absolutely eliminated and I look for Hall to do so at the Interpretation Meeting this fall.

Every referee should carry a stop watch. If he does not have one I know any coach using the shift gladly will furnish one. And the coaches using the shift, by the way, are about one-third of the coaches in the country.

Southerner Stars In Clay Courts Play

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 19.—(INS.)—The second of the semi-final matches in the national clay courts championship tournament are to be played at the Rockhill Club courts here this afternoon between Junior Coen of Kansas City, and Herbert Bowman, of New York. The doubles semi-final match will pit Fritz Mercur, of Harrisburg, and Gilbert Hall, of Orange, N. J., against Frank Shields, of New York, and Emmet Pare, of Dayton, O.

From the Coen-Bowman match will emerge an opponent for Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, the 19-year-old five-foot-four surprise package of the tournament.

The Southern midget, seeded way down the list in the drawings, has bowled over star after star until he stands alone in the lower bracket ready to play for the title tomorrow afternoon.

The winner of today's double match will meet Wray Brown, of St. Louis, and Harris Coggeshall, of Des Moines, in the final tomorrow.

SWIM RECORDS BROKEN

HONOLULU, July 19.—(AP.)—Two more swimming records were shaded in performances in the second session of the international swimming meet here last night.

Buster Crabre, of Honolulu swimming for the University of Southern California, set a new figure for the 800-meter free style event in 10 minutes 15.4 seconds. Johnny Weismuller established the world record of 10:22.2 here in 1927.

The 1928 Olympic record for the 800-meter relay was bettered by the Hui Makani team, of Honolulu, in 9 minutes 23.4 seconds, shading the Olympic mark of 9:36.2 set by the United States team.

Meiji University of Japan, placed second and Yale third in the relay.

The victory gave Hui Makani aggregation a point score of 37 for the meet, as against 27 for Meiji and 25 for Yale. The Los Angeles A. C., represented by Crabbe, had garnered 15 points.

In the intercollegiate meet between Yale and Meiji the latter had 51 points to 44 for the New Haven swimmers.

Officials announced they would seek to have the Hui Makani time acknowledged as a new record for the 800-meter relay.

Nebraska, Vorhies Quit N. B. A. Ranks

LINCOLN, Neb., July 19.—(AP.)—Ira Vorhies, Nebraska boxing commissioner, last night announced that he had tendered his resignation as treasurer of the National Boxing Association because of a controversy over the Primo Carnera-Bearcat Wright bout at Omaha last night. He also said he had withdrawn Nebraska from the association.

Vorhies approved the bout between the Italian and Wright at Omaha in spite of Carnera's suspension by the National Boxing Commission. The Italian knocked Wright out in the fourth round.

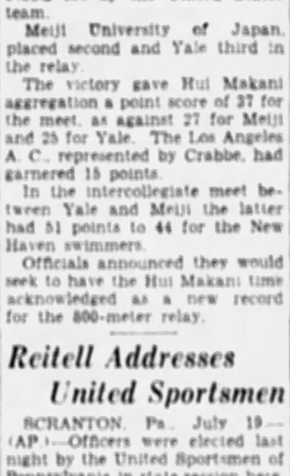
GOLF As Champions Play It



Should a driver be "choked" or gripped at the extreme end?

Answered by

ABE G. ESPINOSA.

One of America's leading professionals. Former Chicago District open champion.

All wooden clubs should be gripped about one-half inch from the end. If the club is "choked" the proper balance and lie of the club are destroyed. At one time I fell into the habit of choking the club about four inches from the end of the shaft. At first I had good results. But it was not easy to grip the club at the same spot on the leather each time, so I have gone back to my original grip, which is a half inch from the end.

Landis Files Answer To Milwaukee Suit

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP.)—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of organized baseball, filed his answer in Federal Court yesterday to the suit filed by owners of the Milwaukee club of the American Association, who seek to block the Commissioner's transfer order of Outfielder Fred Bennett.

In his answer the Commissioner said that Bennett already had two successive seasons of minor league service with clubs owned by the St. Louis Browns, which own "at least 50 per cent of the Milwaukee club," and that further service without an outright release would be a violation of the minor-major league agreement.

Coast Loop Joins Opposition to Draft

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—(AP.)—Joining with officials of the International League, directors of the Pacific Coast Baseball League yesterday flatly rejected a proposed universal draft sought by the major organizations.

They declared it in direct violation of the modified draft agreement now in effect. Their stand is the same as taken by directors of the International League.

With contestants attaining mid-campaign form and the circuit title chases well settled into torrid struggles for supremacy, the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League continues action this afternoon with eight battles on the bi-divisional card. Arid weather the past week or more has dried out local rectangles until they have in many cases become cracked, dusty, and generally treacherous, but despite this impediment to play, enthusiasm for the loop tussling mounts apace, particularly in the upper sector where the going threatens to prove very close, indeed.

EDGEWOOD VS. BEAVER

The champion Edgewood host, ensconced in first place of Section 1 by the narrow margin of two games, must invade the lair of Howdy Campbell and his College Hill combine at Beaver Falls today. On paper the Beaverites rate quite a bit below the class of the brilliant Suburban outfit, but just a year ago and under similar conditions College Hill rose in its might and came very near to bumping the then crown-seekers clear out of the running. Thus it is altogether certain that Edgewood will take no liberties with the fates in the impending encounter.

Over in Mt. Lebanon, Neal Rumsey and his followers, hot on the Edgewood trail, will entertain the rather depleted University Club delegation and will aim for a break that will move them into the coveted top notch in the standing. P. A. A., manifestly in the throes of the worst Winged Head slump in history, is officially slated to meet the third-place Stanton Heights crew on the Red and Gray lot. The match, however, will be reeled off on the Heights, where four courts are available and the surfaces are in good shape. There'll be some good tennis in the course of this affair, with the issue very much a toss-up. The faltering Westinghouse aggregation visits South Hills to round out the Section I program, with the youthful Hilltoppers favored to cop.

PROMISING TUSSLE

Washington Heights and Duquesne Library, dogging the heels of Westinghouse II in the lower half of the loop, will scrap it out on the latter's lot in what looms as the most promising tussle on the Section II bill. The flying Westinghousers are overwhelmingly favored to thump Alpha Kappa Psi in the Electricians' bailiwick, while College Avenue should account for Edgewood Seconds at Edgewood. Newt Norris' Canonsburgers will trek to Verona to joust with Minnetonka for fourth position, with Minnetonka appearing to boast a bit of an advantage, due to longer league experience.

Star Here

JOHNNY WEISSMULLER

Former world champion swimming star, now a professional, who will give exhibitions at Kennywood Park tomorrow afternoon and in the Allegheny River between Sixth and Ninth streets Monday. He also will speak over radio station WCAE.

COEN BATTLES BOWMAN

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—(AP.)—A Missouri Valley representative who has played much in Europe and throughout the nation today was pitted against a defender of the tennis honors of the Atlantic seaboard for the right to play for the national clay courts tennis title tomorrow with Bryant Grant, Jr., of Atlanta, Ga.

Wilbur F. (Junior) Coen, Kansas City boy star and protege of William T. Tilden, was paired with Herbert L. Bowman, New York City. Coen is ranked nationally No. 6; Bowman, 17, and both are acknowledged to be equally familiar with clay courts.

In doubles the 1929 champions, Frederic Mercur and J. Gilbert Hall (Harrisburg, Pa., and Orange, N. J.), were ready to meet Frank X. Shields and Emmett Pare (New York and Dayton, O.), for the right to oppose Harris Coggeshall and Wray Brown (Des Moines and St. Louis) for the title. Rest from the tournament strain was given both doubles combinations yesterday, although Mercur and Shields played an exhibition singles match.

Grant went to the final yesterday by defeating Bruce Barnes, Austin, Tex., 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 2-6, 6-0. Coggeshall and Brown advanced by winning from Fred Royer and Louis Thalheimer, Chicago, 6-2, 6-2, 6-3.

BLUE LARKSPUR IS FAVORED IN RACE CLASSIC

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP.)—The pick of the country's handicap horses, 11 of them, were entered today in the first running of Arlington Park's $25,000 added cup event, a race of championship proportions.

E. R. Bradley's Blue Larkspur, last season's 3-year-old champion, was a 7-to-5 overnight favorite to win the mile-and-a-quarter test, but was assured of plenty of competition from the other 10 stars. Sun Beau, an Eastern favorite, was quoted at 2 to 1, while Toro, winner of the American derby, the Latonia derby and the Lincoln handicap as a 3-year-old; Petee Wrack, Victorian, victor in the $100,000 Agua Caliente handicap, and Snowflake, the outstanding filly of the season, had their share of followers.

The other entrants were Reveille Boy, 50 to 1 shot, which won the American Derby; Stars and Bars, Galahad, Maya and Paul Bunyan.

Blue Larkspur became the favorite after Gallant Fox, undisputed champion of 1930 three-year-olds, and Misstep, the Lamar Stock Farm Stable's popular stake campaigner, were withdrawn.

Jimmy Smith, who piloted Blue Larkspur to victory in the Stars and Bars handicap at Arlington Park July 4, was named to ride the Bradley horse today. Eddie Ambrose had the mount on Toro, and Eddie Steffen had Sun Beau. Willie Fronk, who rode Reveille Boy in the American Derby, was given the job of riding Victorian, while Reveille Boy had J. Leyland. J. Redding was named to ride Stars and Bars, with L. Schaefer on Snowflake. R. Morrison on Paul Bunyan, Carl Meyer on Galahad and C. Quattlebaum on Petee Wrack.

FOUR NET CHAMPS CROWNED IN PARK PLAY

SUN-TELEGRAPH EVENT NEARS COMPLETION

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

Four brand new net champions ascended municipal thrones yesterday as individual district competition in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph revival of the Pittsburgh public parks tennis championships hurtled onward toward completion. Three of the title-captors—Frank Broida of Frick; Jack Redmond of Highland; and Robert Broad of Olympia—graced the man-to-man division, while the fourth, Letitia Schmidt, Schenley victor, made the list of six women's premieres entire.

This afternoon weather permitting—and Forecaster Brotzman confidently predicts that it will permit, precisely as it has been doing right nobly all week—Irvin Goodman, Pitt varsity star, will take on Herbert Lomask, spiller of the dope by virtue of surprising semi-final triumph over Alex Blumberger, second seeded Schenley entrant. The contest billed for the golf links gallery rectangle at 2 o'clock, will determine supremacy of the Murdoch avenue sector and will bring to highly successful conclusion the extensive tussling preliminary to the inter-park elimination series for which survivors of men's and women's jousting in Schenley, Highland, Olympia, Frick, Riverview and West parks will foregather in the Frick area next Thursday, Friday and Saturday to decide finally the Steel City municipal championships, the destiny for one year of the new Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph challenge cups, and the right to journey to Washington, D. C., as local representatives and Pittsburgh-Sun-Telegraph guests at the national public parks championships, the week of August 18.

BROIDA COPS

Broida copped his Frick Park laurels with scintillating display of all-around form to crush Paul Elliott, 1928 Pittsburgh Center Boys champion, 6-0, 6-1, 6-1. Fresh from several months of spirited play on the courts of Harvard University where, despite his less than 18 years, he will soon enter the junior class, Broida brought to zenith the prowess he has been developing since the days when, as a chubby southpaw youngster, he waited his turn on the Schenley lot and the famous old asphalt court of David I. McCahill on the latter's Bartlett street estate. Severe service forces and backhand drives ripping overheads rolled fluently from his flashing racquet. He drove the sidelines, he drove cross-court, he drove for position, he drove for clean placements—and always he drove hard. Elliott, lacking pace and with only stick-to-it-iveness to recommend his game, had never a chance. Broida seized the lead at the outset and faltered not at all till the decision was safely in the bag. Watch the Crimson kid in the Inter-Park tussling!

Redmond had tougher time in tearing off with Highland honors. His opponent, James H. Spencer, sported a fast service and an eminently capable barrier attack that cut into the prep postsider's effectiveness as the fracas wore on and came well within hailing distance of turning the tide in reverse direction.

Redmond breezed through the opening set at love as Spencer appeared nervous and wobbly. Spencer settled considerably in bracket two but still fell short of real consistency, and Redmond, sharing two service breaks, raped in at 6-3. The concluding set followed delivery till Redmond led at 6-5. Here the strain told on Spencer as Redmond forced the going and it was all over as the loser's long-impregnable service gave way for game, set and match.

Redmond drove nicely and interspersed chops with drives in excellent proportion. He scored numerous passing shots as Spencer bored inward the net and he himself approached the barrier on numerous occasions to angle off volleys and overheads without attempt to smash. Spencer was almost utterly without useful ground game. Had he been able to mix fair baseline work with his desperate net-rushing he would have caused his youthful rival plenty of trouble. Redmond proved a most proficient fielder, he retrieved a flock of shots distinctly labeled placement and generally demonstrated that he is a mighty steady boy, especially for a forkhander.

BROAD VICTOR

Broad, former South Hills High School performer, emerged from the ranks as a dark horse to step away with the Olympic verdict in so doing he tallied 8-2, 6-7, 9-7 victory over Rodney Snodgrass, an ex-schoolmate, who had achieved the finale at the expense of Bob Philpott, veteran Duke driver of three years ago, in a terrific five-set struggle, 10-8, 2-6, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3. Three of the Snodgrass sets with Philpott were cared for on Thursday night, but the remaining pair were on tap last evening immediately prior to the final fray, and left the runner-up in condition rather short of absolute freshness for his melee with Broad.

Broad, however, well merited his triumph. His game was nicely reminded, combining stiff drives, deceptive slices, and now and then forecourt sorties productive of neatly angled volleys, though naught in the line of strong overhead. Snodgrass confined himself to chopping from back court. Had he elected to progress to the net oftener, he might have prospered more, for Broad would have had less opportunity to choose weapons and tactics and might have softened his game or waxed erratic in attempting to combat sustained barrier assault.

Snodgrass in upsetting Philpott, blew up the only elimination of a seeded masculine contender that has thus far been recorded in the week's milling. To do so he broke up Bob's wonted driving game by luring the one time Bluffite into a pingpong session far more desirable for victor than for vanquished. Philpott fought gritfully, but not too sagely and as is usually the case in such situations as that sketched above, showed himself unable to win through playing the other fellow's game.

Miss Schmidt, Carrick girl, downed Dorothy Albert in a spirited, three-set debate to garner Schenley the women's sceptre. The verdict read 6-1, 5-7, 6-2, and the skirmish was just as grimly argued as the score would indicate. Neither aspirant hit with great vigor, but both were consistent and both went for every thing that they could in any manner hope to reach. The confusing chops dished up by Miss Schmidt, however, ultimately turned the trick, though Miss Albert's courageous refusal to give up kept the outcome in doubt to the very end.

Goodman, seeded at the head of the Schenley list, swirled past two formidable obstacles, Bill Cornbenhausen and Sammy Braemer, to crash into the finale. Strangely enough, it was Cornbenhausen and not the seeded luminary, Braemer, who offered Goodie the more difficult session of it. The Panther satellite started slowly in his morning tussle with Cornbenhausen and was down at 2-4 and later at 3-5, with two hostile set points in the initial frame. Faced by prospect of disaster in case of further slip-up, Goodman cut the Gordian knot binding the set point problem by driving to notably weak enemy backhand and going to the net for successful sallies. A bit later he ran out at 7-5. Set two saw service prevail to 3-all, whereupon the Pittite slashed through to crack Cornbenhausen's delivery twice while sustaining his own and the duel was over.

LOMASK TRIUMPHS

Braemer went up in smoke before the sturdy Goodman onslaught, 6-0, 6-1, 6-0. Goodman was strong off both forehand and backhand and kept his opponent confined to the baseline throughout the engagement. Braemer evidently discouraged, lapsed into a multitude of errors and was snuffed out in speedy fashion.

Lomask and Blumberger staggered back and forth through a 5-7, 6-4, 7-5, 6-4 marathon, ere the former at length registered the fatal marker. The tennis was far from daring and save for the redemptive feature of the closeness of the tilting, it was scarcely interesting to the gallery. Lomask is a chopper with a better than average net game. He dashed up frequently on Blumberger, whose caution is such as to forbid the risk of trying for passing shots, and just about swayed the balance by his counters speared near the mesh. Whether this style will be of particular value in the teeth of Goodman's pace-laden drives and numerous counter-attacks at the barrier this afternoon remains to be seen. But there'll be a sizeable throng out for the imbroglio and about the best tennis of the tournament to date can be pretty definitely promised. The summary:

DARRELL DEAR:

Please inform the other stations that WJAS challenges them to a golf match on any miniature course in the city. Our scores on a regular course are really too high to issue the challenge in this form. Consider our scores at Chartiers Heights:

Bob Thompson, Jr., 73; Bob Thompson, Sr., 84; Francis Owen, 83; "Howdy" Clark, 89; "Red" McCoy, 247 for the first nine holes.

Clark is hard at work lowering his score at Conneaut Lake. No use checking on the veracity of any of these scores as we're all dyed-in-the-wool golfers.

Radiospecifically yours,

P. S.—Have a good time on your vacation. Here's hoping you break "90" at golf.

CLUB WILL DINE TRAFFIC CHIEF

Lewis W. McIntyre, recently appointed city traffic engineer, will be tendered a testimonial dinner in the Keystone Athletic Club next Thursday night by directors of the Pittsburgh Motor Club. McIntyre is first vice president of the club, a member of its board and chairman of the traffic problems committee.

John M. Rice, president of the club, will be toastmaster. Speakers will be Walter Rosenbaum of the Better Traffic Committee; Assistant Superintendent of Police Ben R. Marshall and Dr. Thomas M. Heard, Jr. The arrangements committee is headed by C. H. Allen, chairman. Among the guests will be Frank L. Duggan, chairman of the Better Traffic Committee, and Inspector of Traffic Jacob Dorsey.

SOOST URGES STATE AID

Magistrate W. J. Soost of Traffic Court today urged that a state appropriation be made to help defray the expense of his tribunal.

Last year, he pointed out, the state received $22,517.50 from fines imposed on offending motorists in Traffic Court. For the first six months of this year the state has collected $9,465 as its share.

The city's share last year totaled $82,174.20 and for the first six months this year, $33,894.

Magistrate Soost said:

"The state does not contribute a penny toward the operation of Traffic Court, although it receives a substantial sum each year from fines.

"This is unfair to the city, which not only must bear the cost of patroling the streets and making arrests, but also the upkeep of Traffic Court, with its 18 employes, in addition to the magistrate."

Smith's quarter-breed Indian inamorata, Mrs. Maude Lowther, 22, is to be tried later for the murder, which occurred on a lonely road near here the night of May 29. Mrs. Smith was shot as she sat in her husband's automobile holding her baby son.

ACCIDENT MAPS GIVEN SCHOOLS

A total of 1,565 maps indicating where fatal and non-fatal traffic accidents to children have occurred have been distributed to parochial and public schools and to civic and luncheon clubs during the last six months, Walter Rosenbaum, chairman of the Better Traffic Committee's education group, announced. Maps sent to schools are kept up to date by monthly reports sent out to the schools.

When the original maps were issued January 1, there were 105 child traffic fatalities and 448 non-fatal accidents involving children spotted on the map. So far this year there have been 11 more children killed and 98 non-fatal accidents. All the children killed in accidents this year have been pedestrians. Reports to the schools are based on records of Coroner W. J. McGregor and the reports of police.

Husband Charges, His Wife With Non-Support

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—(AP.)—For the first time in the memory of local court officials, a husband appeared in Domestic Relations Court to ask an order on his wife for support.

Hyman Segal, 54, asked that his wife, Esther, 50, from whom he has been separated two months, to contribute to his support. He said he was unable to work and that he received $7 a week from the Jewish charities. He told the court his wife was in the electrical business and had forced him out of their house.

Mrs. Segal testified her husband had not worked during the 17 years they had been married.

Judge William M. Lewis reserved decision, but indicated that if investigation proved the husband's story to be true he would issue a support order against Mrs. Segal.

2 HELD IN TAXI HOLDUP

Captured by police, who said they found them robbing a taxicab driver at Perrysville avenue and Charles street last night, Fred J. Riley, 23, of Sheffield street, and Charles Norton, 26, of Butler street, West Etna, today were being held in North Side Police Station.

The two police said hired the cabe of John Elvins, 33, of 6071 Broad street in Allegheny avenue and asked to be driven to West View. Near Charles street police allege, they pointed revolvers at Elvins.

Patrolmen Charles Stamps and Joseph Croke, who saw the gun, ordered the suspects to halt. Instead they fled amid a volley of shots but were captured after a chase.

An armed man, shortly after midnight entered the White Tower lunch room, 115 Atwood street, forced Anthony Smith, of 116 Brown avenue, Turtle Creek, and Michael Schultz, of 11 Mayflower street, waiters into a corner and rifled the cash register of $50. He escaped.

No trace had been found by police today of the youthful thug who yesterday attempted to rob Clara V. Brooks, 70, of 6835 Frankstown avenue, cashier at the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor, 42 Duquesne way. When the robber pointed a revolver and demanded money, the cashier screamed and was seized by the throat.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Service

Monty Quint hopped out of the taxi and was taken up to his mammoth duplex fourteen-room apartment.

Monty had cars in plenty, but he found it far more sensible and quite as economical to use a taxi instead of having one of his chauffeurs inch his way down through the maze in the William, Nassau and Wall street district with his block-long imported car.

As Monty's man took his hat when he left himself into the rococo foyer he overheard

"Rully, I wonder what is delaying the person?"

It was Mrs Montgomery Wellingsford Quint speaking. Monty Quint was always Monty Quint to his myriad friends but his wife had long ago ceased being Mrs. Monty Quint—it would have made her quite ill if anyone had called her Mrs. Monty Quint.

She was chatting with Miss Ursella Vanget.

"Hello, there, Bess," Monty called, cheerily as he entered the library.

"Why Montgomery," his wife chided, and then, "This is Miss Vanget—my literary expert. She will, in future, select my reading matter for me."

"Tell you what you like to read, eh? It's a good trick, whether she can do it or not, eh, Miss Van-GET?"

"It is quite the modern idea, sir," Miss Vanget answered, flushing slightly at the manner in which he emphasized the last syllable of her name.

"And you know, Montgomery," his wife said, "that life today would be hideous without modernism."

"Oh," said Monty.

There was a dull silence.

"I mean just plain 'Oh,'" he chuckled. Miss Vanget stared at him.

"Hot stuff, that Amos 'n' Andy."

"I never listen to it," Miss Vanget said primly.

"What's the matter—no radio or ear trouble? Everybody listens." He turned to his wife. "What person is delaying you, Bess?"

Modern Stuff

"Montgomery, please, not so much levity—it is Elizabeth. The person who is delaying me is my dog-washer. He took Imogene away and hasn't brought her back."

"Ha—that's a hot one—you send the pooch out like the laundry, eh—"

"The dog-washing person has returned, Imogene, madam," Oliver, the man-servant, announced.

Monty laughed.

"Excuse me. I thought of something funny," he said, and with a nod he backed out of the room.

He was in the living room, smoking a cigar and reading the Wall street editions when his wife came in. As he looked up he noticed some changes.

"Ha! You've been reducing by the simple method of hopping on and off a stepladder while you changed these pictures. Great idea, Bess."

"Montgomery, don't be absurd. I had a professional picture-hanger over — he knows all about light effects and how to hang some low to get the right perspective. It is a wonderful service."

"H-m-m, more modern stuff?"

"Certainly—all a part of the finer art of living."

"Swell."

"Please—that is a terrible word."

"I meant 'hot stuff'—now—now, hold on there Bess—don't blow off steam—you stick to your modernization stuff and your new creed of service and let little Monty alone to dig the gelt out of Wall Street. And say, I want you to come out with us tonight—Zollie's Follies open — Chick Vanson, Barney Pastor and some of the boys are going in a bunch with their wives. We're to stop over at Chick's place after—he's rigged up a clever little thing in his library — the bookcases turn around and — zippo — there's a full-rigged bar!"

"Zollie's Follies, indeed! I should say not—besides this is the night for my teacher of Art Appreciation to come."

"Art Appreciation, eh? Bet he couldn't pick a Corot from a chromo—just a bluffer. Zollie is the art expert; when he picks 'em, they're artistic. Come on—you haven't been any place with me in a dog's age."

"I couldn't do it. One has to know art to talk intelligently."

"Well, know the curators of four art museums, and I pay my cook more money every year than any of 'em get. How about tomorrow night? Big Courtlandt and his bride are back, and he's throwing a party—"

Expensive Wife

"Tomorrow night my bridge teacher gives me a three-hour lesson. He brings two other players—"

"And you hand him 200 of my good bucks for that sort of guff!"

"Three hundred. This is the era of service—and in this modern day one must be a bridge expert—contract bridge—or one isn't—er—in it, Montgomery."

"In what—debt?"

"Don't be crude—one isn't in the midst of modernism and the true service era."

A few days later, when Monty Quint popped into his home, a slight, pale-faced youth with a flowing Windsor tie was overseeing two huskies who were moving furniture about.

"What ho, Bess. Installment men moving us out?" Monty asked. It was his idea of humor, and for a man of multiple millions, it was rather humorous, at that.

"Montgomery!" shrilled Mrs. Montgomery Wellingsford Quint, "what will Professor Squidgley, here, think?"

Monty looked at the pale young man.

"Does he?" Monty asked.

"Go as far as you like, my dear, except my little den — move so much as one ash tray and there'll be fireworks," Monty said.

Monty wanted his wife to take a drive up Westchester way. A friend of his had built a miniature nine-hole course under a glassed-in pavilion and he was anxious to try it.

"There is so much more worth while in this modern day I really cannot go with you. Tonight I have to consult with my car upholsterer and devote some time with my social secretary." Only she pronounced it 'seck-tren.'

"Hell's bells, Bess, you haven't been anywhere with me in months——"

"Such language, Montgomery."

First time I ever heard it was from your old man at the time he was dockmaster——"

"Montgomery!"

Another time Monty came home early, hoping to get his wife to hop over to the yacht club dock and take a spin in the new and wonderfully luxurious speed craft he had bought.

"I cannot, my gem cleaner is here, can't you see?"

A man was busily engaged in dipping Mrs. Quint's many jewels in some liquid, brushing and cleaning them.

Monty Disgusted

Monty Quint was disgusted.

"If you haven't time to clean 'em yourself when they get dirty, throw 'em away and get new," he said, and walked away, muttering.

On still another occasion he met two men staggering out with heavy leather cases that contained his valuable silver.

"What's this daylight robbery stuff?" Monty yelled, ready to smash them with his cane.

"We're the silver cleaners, sir."

Monty sent for his wife. It was true. Every piece was listed and receipted for.

"What the so-and-thusly do you have maids for?" he demanded.

"These are experts, and, besides, silver polish mars the maid's hands. They object."

Mrs. Montgomery Wellingsford Quint, soon after this, was to entertain a few of her select friends from her New Sphere League. They would have their husbands with them, she explained.

"Or somebody's husbands. All right. I'll be home," Monty promised.

He was going to mix up a few of his favorite drinks, believing that he might get a little pep into her modern crowd, but not a chance.

"My dear, that is quite out of date. I have a Master of Beverages engaged," she informed him.

"Master of Beverages? — an expert who knows how to grade and mix and serve liquors properly. It is quite the thing in the way of service."

"Service? And have you a professor of drinking to lick up the stuff this Master of Beverages will shake up?"

"Be nice, Monty."

Monty tried to be nice.

The party was a fizzle.

After this, for weeks and weeks, Monty fell over the dog exerciser or the rug renovator or the bric-a-brac arranger. And often the beauty expert would be on hand working over Mrs. Montgomery Wellingsford Quint.

"For the love of June apples, Bess, do come along with me tonight. Bob Harmsworth is entertaining Lord Jannifer out at his place and he's got the whole cast from the 'Vanity Box' out to throw a show," Monty pleaded, when he came in early and found the shoe fitter there and the fiction reader.

Monty Finds Way

"Quite out of the question—our Modern Service League meets tonight at Mrs. Astoria's. I have a paper on the subject of 'Service.'"

Monty Quint laughed.

"Service!" he yelped, and then he said "service" again, surrounding it with a few lurid adjectives until his wife told him that he was "rully too vulgar to bear."

Monty went up to Harmsworth's alone. His friends had their wives along. Monty wished he had Bess.

Things went along in the same way for some weeks.

One evening his wife was busy with her reader, the woman who read excerpts from the latest and best-touted fiction so that she would have a smattering of them all to talk about.

Monty finally came down in full evening regalia and slouched over in a corner reading his paper.

"Montgomery, don't rattle the newspaper," said Mrs. Montgomery Wellingsford Quint.

The servant announced, "Miss Arline Newberry."

"Er—who? Do I know the person?"

"It's for me, Bess," said Monty. "Modern stuff—service—the pretty young lady calls and goes out with the Tired Business Man to help amuse him—don't sit up for me!"

Mrs. Montgomery Wellingsford Quint went out and got a look at Miss Arline Newberry and it was quite an eyeful. Monty went out with her, laughing gayly.

He waved his hand at his wife.

"Service, my dear Bess—modern service," he said.

Unemployment Problem Solved by Prize Letter Writer

Nationwide Shetland Pony Competition Winner Named

MRS. TRUFFLEMEYER WITH GRAND PRIZE

Editor's Note—Several months ago we offered a Shetland Pony for the Best Letter offering a Solution of the Unemployment Problem. We thought nothing further about the matter until yesterday when we accidentally picked up one of the unopened letters, and absentmindedly opened it. The communication follows—

DETROIT.

Dear Contest Editor—

A recent court decision makes home brew implements illegal. Fortunately this decision automatically solves the unemployment problem. Search every home in America! Wherever a cork is found, jail the illegal owner for possession! This will immediately require construction of a $1,000,000 jail in every precinct of every city. Billions will be spent for building materials and labor. Consequently every unemployed man will be pressed into service or into jail.

Mrs. H. Trufflemeyer.

Brief Local Comment

Editorials "Boiled Down" for Hot Weather Readers.

Hats off in tribute to State Trooper Charles L. Stewart, of Troop A, Greensburg, killed in the performance of duty at Monessen yesterday. The people of Pennsylvania owe much to policemen like Stewart who boldly face death in warfare against criminals and occasionally make "the supreme sacrifice."

Thomas C. Foley, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, announces that eight organizations have accepted invitations to hold their next conventions in Pittsburgh. Welcome news. But what a shame that invitations cannot be extended to the largest organizations because Pittsburgh does not have an auditorium big enough to accommodate a convention of the first magnitude.

It speaks well for Pittsburgh that so many young men and women are learning to pilot airplanes. One local aviation school in its first annual report states it had 200 students during the year. These young people will be an invaluable asset in the campaign of our civic bodies to make the city a great aviation center.

A Public Service Commission ruling just handed down offers a striking commentary on the unreasonableness of bus fares in Pittsburgh. Taxicab drivers are forbidden to cruise along the routes of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company and pick up prospective bus riders. It appears that the taxicabs, holding only four or five passengers, can make money carrying passengers to town at the same rate—25 cents each—as is charged for the bus ride.

Under modern conditions, with machines taking the place of men, there is always more or less unemployment, even when business is booming and mills operating at capacity. So there is no particular reason to be dismayed over the number of jobless men found by the census enumerators in Allegheny County. Nevertheless the situation is not to be ignored. It constitutes a challenge, and civic bodies and the public authorities should study the problem and try to find a remedy. Immediate construction of authorized public works like the Town Hall would help.

*Beaver County is to be congratulated on the in-*crease of more than 33 per cent in its population during the last decade, just revealed by the census report. The county has had a healthy growth which has brought many benefits. Rural acreage has been developed into town lots with enhancement in real estate values. The market for many kinds of commodities has improved. Increase of population brings opportunities, and many in Beaver County have been shrewd enough to take advantage of them.

County Fire Marshal Thomas L. Pfarr's warning about conditions at Glenshaw is calculated to make people thoughtful. He declared at a Public Service Commission hearing that to move the Butler road over against the chemical plant there, as proposed, would endanger the public. The Oakdale holocaust in which scores were killed during the war is attributed to a spark caused by a hobnail in a man's shoe which struck a steel floor; so it does not seem unreasonable to see peril in automobiles passing alongside a plant dealing with explosive and inflammable materials. Pfarr is a specialist on fire hazards. If anyone is an authority on them, he should be.

*The Police Bureau is to be commended for its re-*cent activities in enforcing the regulation against parking automobiles in the streets all night. And the motorcycle officers known as "Night Riders" who have been tagging the offending vehicles are to be commended for their energy. The territory covered by them in a night and the number of autos tagged indicate that very little time is wasted on their tour of the city.

*The State Department of Labor and Industry re-*ports there were fewer industrial accidents in Pennsylvania during the first six months of the year than in the corresponding period last year, and that the decrease in employment was not sufficient wholly to account for the decline in mishaps. There is no doubt that the "safety first" movement in the industries has been productive of beneficial results. It offers encouragement for the belief that automobile accidents can also be reduced through an incessant campaign of education.

*J. Anson Wright, Republican candidate in Bed-*ford County for the State House of Representatives, announces he will support Gifford Pinchot for Governor even if Pinchot should be deprived of the Republican nomination by the Supreme Court's decision in the Luzerne County perforated ballot case. There are unquestionably many thousands of other Republicans in Pennsylvania who feel as Wright does—that if Pinchot loses the nomination it will be because of technicalities—and that Republicans who believe in decency and fair play ought to continue to support him.

The Better Traffic Committee reports there has been a decrease of 39 per cent in horse-drawn vehicles downtown in the last three years. But a news dispatch from the mountains of West Virginia suggests that in that region, at least, the horse has not been superseded by the automobile; for the correspondent speaks of two persons as residing "within a day's horseback ride of each other."

*Pittsburgh businessmen have been advised to re-*vise their mailing lists to save the waste that comes from sending letters to obsolete or otherwise inaccurate addresses. Ten million letters containing advertising matter were destroyed by the Postoffice Department last year, it is stated, because they were improperly addressed. Undoubtedly a very much greater waste comes from sending such matter to persons so little interested in it that they drop it into the waste basket unread.

Marriage

And Tennis.

Marriage, an institution that takes a lot of punishment from comic strip artists and others, has a stanch defender in Eileen Bennett, English tennis star who recently became Mrs. Fearnley-Whittingstall.

Marriage doesn't hurt tennis, anyway, she says—and points as proof to the fact that of 96 entrants in the women's singles at Wimbledon, 34 were wives. Helen Wills Moody is, of course, the outstanding example of a woman whose game has not suffered from wedlock.

As for babies, Mrs. Whittingstall admits they are a complication, but not for long. Mme. Rene Mathieu won a French championship with her child rooting for her from a perambulator on the sidelines. And in time we may expect some woman to carry off a title amid the applause of her grandchildren in the galleries.

Divorce doesn't hurt, either, though Mrs. Whittingstall does not mention it.

Sitting On Top

While the mundane world must pause

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Pajamas

We advise the seashore constabulary to keep a judicial eye on those beach pajamas.

"Bugs" Baer

That's how it started on the Riviera. First they discarded the nocturnal pajamas and then they sent the coats to the laundry. We saw plenty of baggy silks and satins at Lido Venice. But the lingerie got thinner and more transparent as we journeyed west until at Juan Le Pin they discarded all postage.

It is an amazing sight to see a premier dashing into the surf in a form-fitting set of dignified whiskers. And while they claim that American modesty is sterling hypocrisy we prefer to take our premiers medium boiled with the shell on.

Pajamas are for the night which has a thousand eyes and a million eyelets. But they are wearing them at Santa Monica, Long Beach, Atlantic City and Southampton. And, while there is nothing beautiful in an old-fashioned, flannel nightgown, it is just as artistic as a pair of hips that look like a mooshead hatrack.

To make it worse passengers on transcontinental trains are also wearing pajamas from east to west and so forth. They wear 'em on the observation platform, the club car and the dining car.

Soon they will be wearing 'em in parades, on bicycles and in cafeterias. We object to people wearing pajamas in the daytime. It spoils our reputation as a wide-awake nation.

We are not criticising people's foibles and eccentricities. We find with the years that we grow less exacting and more mellow with age. But then, so does an old cantaloupe.

When taking railroad trips in a day coach we don't want to go through tunnels with a stranger in pajamas.

And in dining cars pajamas are all right with grapefruit but they don't look right with minute steaks, animal crackers and birdseed.

A business man in a southern city inaugurated the custom of going to the office in pajamas. Which was all right, until his boss discovered that he hadn't come directly from his own home.

Usage and fashion of the centuries have dictated certain apparel for certain occasions. You wear a high hat at morning weddings and during graduations in one-armed lunchrooms.

Swallow-tails and spats are the discreet caper when plowing up Fifth avenue under your own power. White vests and paper collars are perfect for theater parties. But pajamas have always been reserved for the privacy of the boudoir or the pup tent if you happen to be in the Marines.

MATTER AND ITS STRUCTURE

By Archibald Henderson

The study of matter has been going merrily on down through the centuries. But it is only within very recent time that we have been able to learn anything very definite or quantitative about matter. Matter or substance is still believed to be divided into molecules for the physicist, into atoms for the chemist. The atom was found to have certain constituent parts, to which were given the names of electron and proton.

Thus the physicist arrived at certain tiny building blocks of Nature. The question which naturally arose was: How big are they, and what do they look like?

Newton thought of matter as composed of "solid, massy, hard, impenetrable, movable particles." Newton regarded these particles as conforming to the meaning of the word atom: Indivisible.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century the Englishman, John Dalton, advanced the law of definite proportions—viz. that elements combine in definite proportions by weight to form compounds. For example, sodium chloride consists of the elements sodium and chlorine combined in such a way that for every 23 parts by weight of sodium there are found to be 35½ parts by weight of chlorine.

The explanation given by Dalton was ingenious in its simplicity. One atom of each substance enters into a combination with just one atom of the other substance. They are in one to one correspondence, as we say; and always combine to form a pair. If now the weight of a sodium atom is to the weight of a chlorine atom as 23 to is to 35½, the problem is solved. If a million atoms of sodium combine with a million atoms of chlorine, the analysis of the resulting compound must still show the relative proportions of 23 to 35½.

Dalton's view, in the main, is more firmly entrenched than ever on the chemical side. From the standpoint of the physicist, Dalton has been proved to be wrong; since we know today that the atom is not the smallest particle. But from the standpoint of chemistry, it is generally accepted that an atom is the smallest particle capable of taking part in a chemical change.

During the course of the past century and a quarter many attempts have been made to measure the molecule. The limiting thickness of the excessively thin film formed on the surface of water by a single drop of oil, must be at least the diameter of one molecule. By experiment in which weight, density and area were known it was finally determined that the diameter of a liquid molecule was something like a hundred millionth of a centimeter. It was further shown that the diameters of the molecules of the simple gases range from two to three times the diameter of a liquid molecule.

Certain beautiful investigations were made by Sir William Bragg and his son, in the determination of the interior structure of solid molecules. He did this by means of the X-ray shadows of the molecules. It was found that the diameters of solid molecules range in size from one to five times the diameter of a liquid molecule.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

From where I am writing in the woods I can see a hill.

Free and alone, it rises from the valley into the wide, sunny sky. And I have a very friendly interest in that hill. For a whole year now we have faced each other—I from my place under this old oak, it from its place in the sky. So it is, to me, no longer a dumb pile of earth and rock. It is an arrangement of life—abundant and vigorous life.

All sorts of things happen in and on and to that hill. Bears and coyotes, squirrels, foxes, little ground owls and snakes and all manner of bugs live within the hill—sleep and breed there in burrows and dens—have crept caches of food—and make long, winding runways where they go about their various business.

Deer come stepping softly, lightly through the dim corridors of trees—weave in and out through dappled shadows—bend to drink about some still, brown pool. Bobcats flatten, watching, along gnarled boughs. Birds nest within the leaves—at dawn and dusk the whole forest is webbed with song. At noon buzzards hang motionless within the white, hot bowl of sky. At midnight owls go hooting through the chaparral—and bats chase midges with a tiny squeak.

And, of course, the flowers rise and fall constantly in a bright, fragrant tide. Always there are flowers on the hill. Even under a crust of snow I have seen the manzanita's waxy, rosy bells.

And never is the hill free from the coming and the going of the wind and the sun and the rain. Constantly its mood changes. There are times when it spreads frail as a bubble against the dreaming sky.

Then it is hard to realize that there are dangerous dens behind that lovely sheen—and foul and poisonous pests within that tenderness. And then, again, there are times when the hill bulks like a fighting, black brute against the sky. Then all the loveliness is gone, and it is utterly savage—pitting its wild strength against the snarling elements.

Never, at any two times, is the hill quite the same. But always, whatever its aspect or mood, it holds my interest. Yes, more than my interest. I feel respect for that hill—respect for the life it gives and the struggle which goes on within it. It is true that it gives life to snakes and bobcats as well as birds and flowers. But, from where I sit, all things, regardless of their nature, seem to have their right to life on the hill—and a reason for being. So I do not condemn the hill's products or criticize its moods. I do not fuss at it or sit in judgment upon it. I only watch it in wonder and respect and frequent delight—rejoicing in its abundant life.

That is the way I always feel about that hill. I wish I could always feel that way about men and women. For human beings are just another sort of arrangement of life—and they have as much right to their peculiar pattern as that hill. I have no more right to fuss at humans because, out of their abundance, they produce faults and follies than I have to fuss at the hill because it produces weeds as well as barley and bobcats as well as birds. I have no more right to get mad at them or sit in judgment on them than I have to get mad at that hill. But I do get mad at them and try to interfere with them.

Life, for me, would be a much finer affair if I could be as tolerant toward living humans as I am toward a living hill.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Playing at Life

Who would share in the silken ease
Of a being sheltered from sun and breeze,
One who has hands too white to soil,
And shoulders too weak for the burden of toil.
One who shrinks from the common lot
And must dwell apart, in a sacred spot?

Many must labor from dawn till night,
Finding scant time for the world's delight;
Taxing their powers of hand and head
For a place of shelter and daily bread.
Little they learn of the joys of earth,
Its bloom and beauty, its marvels and mirth.

Life must be hard for those who see
Only its hard reality.
Life may be hard, but better so
Than playing at living while swift years go,
Better the tumult and toil and strife
Than the pallid pleasures of playing with life!

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

Twenty-four hours earlier, again, they could have been turned into any part of a forelimb, but not into anything else but the forelimb. But in the earliest stages of all they could have been switched over to becoming any organ whatsoever, from liver to eye, from brain to bladder.

The whole egg, in other words, behaves first as a single field of organization, if we may use the term; and it gradually becomes divided up into smaller and smaller fields, each different from the rest and with a large measure of independence. The splitting up of the singleness of the early embryo into this patchwork is touched off by the action of the dorsal lip "organizer."

H. G. Wells

The influence thus set in motion spreads at a definite rate from region to region. For instance, the influence which determines the formation of the eyelens from a particular area of outer skin has to travel outwards from the brain through the optic cup or first main rudiment of the eye.

If, while this influence is traversing the optic cup, the cup be cut out and grafted elsewhere, it still has the power of transmitting the influence to the skin, and so can call out the production of a lens from skin or back of flank.

That the chemical differences thus established persist through life is shown by some remarkable facts of regeneration. If a newt's tail is amputated the cells restore just what is missing. Some influence peculiar to the region of the cut determines what shall be formed there.

If the bud growing out to replace the amputated tail be grafted to some other part of the body, say on to the fresh cut stump of a leg, it will go on developing into a tail, provided it is more than a few days old. If, however, it is grafted onto the leg stump earlier while still a mere boss of cells, its destiny is not yet fixed; it will now turn into a leg instead of a tail.

The very early bud is like a very young embryo. The active cell division at the tail's cut surface has produced a mass of undifferentiated cells, capable of turning into arm or leg as readily as tail.

Which they shall turn into is at this stage decided by the influences of the area which they happen to grow. Soon it settles down as an embryo does and its parts assume definite responsibilities.

In the developing organism as plasticity gives place to fixity of direction, the unified whole becomes the mosaic of chemically independent parts. Different creatures differ markedly from each other concerning the time at which this transformation is effected.

Just as with the determination of the direction lines of the body some eggs have all their symmetry ready made for them in the ovary, others wait and have it decided by outer agencies after fertilization, so here.

In frogs and newts and many other creatures the irrevocable chemical decisions are not taken till late, well after the close of segmentation. In other eggs, however, like those of sea-squirts, the corresponding step has been pushed backward to just after fertilization; and in still others the egg may already have become a chemical mosaic even before it is shed from the ovary. In such cases, of course, there is little or none of the plasticity found in vertebrates during segmentation.

If the two first cells into which such an egg divides be separated from each other, each turns into a half-embryo and does not regulate itself to a whole. But in all the principles remain the same, it is only that the time relations are shifted.

Abroad With A New Yorker

By O. O. McIntyre

BRUSSELS.—Brussels is a reputed "little Paris." Architecturally there is a slight similarity, and Brussels has its Bois and Avenue Louise, strikingly like the Champs Elysees. There to me, at least, the similarity ends. I felt at once a kindlier and more friendly attitude toward foreigner.

It began at the border and wound up at 11 p. m. when the proprietor of the Hotel Atlanta—and here's a free puff he did not know he would receive—routed out the kitchen help, opened his spacious dining room and even provided a violin and piano duet to serve four light meals. It was gracious and warm.

Living here for the tourist is probably cheaper than any place else in Europe just now. I exchanged a thousand French francs at the cashier's desk and received 1460 Belgian francs. Better hotel accommodations—and less insolence than in Paris—are about one third cheaper.

One, too, is impressed, after gay Paree, with the small number of sidewalk cafes and general sobriety. There are many pavement drinkeries here, but in nearly every one—and I made a careful inspection—the tipple is light beer or a mineral water. The people also seem more alert and less excitable over trifles.

The proximity to Holland leaves its mark in waddling gentlemen with feathers in their hats puffing huge S-shaped pipes. The Belgians have a large percentage of blondes, both male and female and the ladies in many instances are remarkable types of Flemish beauty.

A gypping taxi driver—one cannot escape the rascals anywhere—took us for a drive through the local Bois, by the way of Venice, I think. This morning I learned it was only a few blocks from the hotel, but we were an hour going and an hour coming. He charged 30 extra francs—he didn't get—for "supplements," whatever they are.

He also pointed out a beautiful brick and mosaic structure, the beetle-browed liar, he said was the home of a Belgian duke and "tres riche." This morning I found it was really a municipal electric light plant. But we got more culturally out of his run-around than he got financially. The entire cost was about three American bucks.

* * *

As Belgium was having one of its most important fetes, we had opportunity to see the King's palace and his gardens facing them at night-lighted up. It is an imposing stone structure about the length of four Fifth avenue blocks—far more regal than Buckingham, the only other king's home I ever saw. The driver pointed to the raised flag atop the building which, unless he was lying again, indicates His Majesty was at home. We also saw the famous King's promenade in the Bois, a beautiful and somber wooded stretch where the king strolled daily to meditate during the emotionally torn days of war. His Majesty and his Queen are greatly beloved. Reverence for them is everywhere. But they have no real power. They symbolize a tradition only.

* * *

The piece de resistance gastronomically—Irvin Cobb ate a half bushel basket of them at one sitting—is a patisserie callen Pain a la Grecque. It is a sort of cookie cut up in plugs, like tobacco; made of flour sprinkled with grated almond and cinnamon and encased in a sticky honey covering. It is "the nerts" or the Belgian equivalent. I still have some of the honey on my vest and a little in my hair.

* * *

Policemen in Brussels wear white helmets and carry black clubs. The streets are filled with those funny little short-haired and pen-wiper dogs. You can almost carry them in your vest pocket, and many women do in shopping bags. Billy seems very contemptuous, not even stopping for the customary sniff en passant. I wish some one would teach that dog there is something in life besides his own selfish pleasure.

* * *

Cathedrals as a rule leave me without a single notch-rise in temperature. But famous Saint Gudule, flooded with indirect lighting last night in its gray-white dignity was actually breath-taking. Somehow you unconsciously remove your hat and are caught up in the gush of emotional ecstasy. I promised myself not to quarrel with Bill Hogg for 24 hours. We have come all the way to Brussels, however, and are still speaking, but not with any high enthusiasm.

* * *

Brussels, with its more than 800,000 population, has a large number of blacks from the Belgian Congo in the heart of Africa—an area a hundred times larger than Belgium itself. They doll up in the smartest clothes and speak a strange jargon, half French patois and half ju-ju savage.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Don't allow your spirit to be broken.

When you permit yourself to think that the world is against you that there is no use trying, you are on the slide which may land you soon on the scrap heap of humanity.

You may have had bad breaks, great misfortune, but you can still recover without effort.

You know of many men and women who seemed to have passed along in a comparatively easy way, stepping from one success to another with apparent ease.

But you have not known the setbacks and discouragements of many of those whom you call lucky, and they may have had as many as you have.

Few reach adult life without periods when difficulties seemed insurmountable and success meant hardship.

The emotionally well-balanced person keeps his or her head and goes quietly at it to find out the reason for trouble and failures.

There is a solution somewhere and somehow and the thing is to find it.

But if matters have moved smoothly for you always there is danger of over confidence and a final smash.

Keep your spirit and stiffen your backbone; hope and work and keep at it with a cheerful face and the end may be better than you think.
